HARDING OPENS DOOR TO EUROPEAN AFFAIR

The WEEK

By A. M. Brayton

PRESIDENT HARDING'S "feeler" suggesting that out of the disarmament conference may come an association of nations of permanent character is the present center of interest. The administration offers no definite plan, although it may have one in readiness. English comment indicates that, recalling our rejection of the league of nations, that country will not commit itself until it has been shown that the senate and the public is in accord with the idea. Having now the league, including forty-eight nations, Lloyd George naturally is unwilling to surrender it for a substitute which might, history repeating, be repudiated by its own authors. However, the action of the president shows that republican leadership is aware of the futility of agreements not to be carried forward by some definite concert of powers to articulate it with world events as they develop. The league of nations has settled upwards of seventy international disputes out of which war might have grown. Bad as things are now, it may have saved the world from chaos. Europe wants America in some sort of league. It does not want another American made league of which America shall not be a member.

* * * *

Hope for substantial results from the conference seems to be supported by events. While conceding little for the present, France has won assurances of international support with which to play for the "moral disarmament" of Germany as the basis upon which land forces may be reduced. Despite misgivings of China, progress toward a far eastern settlement has been sufficient to warrant the belief that Japan will adjust itself to the Hughes naval reduction proposals, at least approximately. America's rumored stand for the retention of gas warfare as means of defense is hard to understand. It may mean that we lead the world in gas but foreign chemists can be trusted to match our own. The story has a disconcerting sound, for gas warfare makes for the brutality which has made war a stench in the nostrils of civilization. However, this may be American trading stock, perhaps based upon French necessity for the moment. But that it challenges the spirit of the whole disarmament movement is enough to condemn it. Perhaps it will be explained in the wash of minor conflicting contentions, and we shall come out clean.

Crown Prince Hirohito was named regent for his invalid father during the peace conference. What does it mean? A "sick" minister and a substituted leader in the conference had preceded. Why the regency at this moment. Does it mean that a change of policy took place following the assassination of the Japanese premier? Japan's position, although somewhat reactionary, has seemed to be frank enough, but when looking to the east Europe and America are wont to watch for "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain."

Senate republicans are fighting to seat Newberry, but not without opposition in their own ranks. This is a luxury the party can not afford. It will lower the moral tone of the administration. The thing involved is not Newberry, but a principle. Whenever the expenditure of any man to secure public office exceeds the legitimate purposes of advertising and organization, the presumption is that the free action of the majority has been tampered with.

While efforts to secure an adjustment with Ulster proceed with difficulty, a reign of terror continues in Belfast. Conditions emphasize the fact that Ireland's internal troubles are more difficult of solution than her quarrel with England. At the very mention of settlement, the Irish reaction is to shoot it out.

The new liberal party has gained foothold in Wisconsin. It was brought here by the Committee of Forty-eight which in 1920 organized the third party that, upon La Follette's rejection of its class conscious platform and program was absorbed by labor. Those who participated in the meeting here were La Follette leaders, and a second attempt to draft him for national leadership seems to be in progress. Within the week Judge Long, a prominent La Follette leader, initiated a movement for a new farmers organization. Perhaps this indicated that La Follette regards the Non-partisan league as moribund, and seeks a new alliance with the agriculturalists that will be free from control of the communist leaders who dominated North Dakota before their repudiation in the recent recall election. The liberal party program as announced is not to put a ticket in the field in 1922, but to assist in electing republicans who are pledged to shift their allegiance to the liberal party in time for the presidential campaign of 1924. In Wisconsin republicanism is a coat of many colors that anyone can wear. Is something about to happen to Joseph?

SALE OF CHRISTMAS SEALS IS ON; FIGHTS THE "WHITE PLAGUE"

Sticker Aid in Raising Funds to Help Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association Do Work

DEATH RATE IN WISCONSIN FROM T. B. SHOWS DECREASE

Report of Dearholt Tells of Accomplishments of Association

THE Christmas seal sale, an annual institution that aids the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association keep up its work, is now on.

In every city, town, village and hamlet in the state these seals that carry the message, "Merry Christmas; Healthy New Year" go on sale to help pay the cost of local, state and national movements designed to end the "great white plague," tuberculosis.

Dr. E. Evans of La Crosse is a member of the board of directors of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association, which body asks the support of the people of the state in the sale of these seals.

Report Shows Results

An idea of the past year's work and some of the plans for the ensuing year may be gleaned from the annual report of Hoyt E. Dearholt, M. D., executive secretary of the association which in part, follows:

"Whereas the 1908 rate in Wisconsin from tuberculosis was 109.3, in 1919—the last official federal figures available—the rate was 84.1, a decrease of one quarter. A similar reduction has been brought about throughout the United States. Our population has increased and that had the 1908 rate prevailed in 1919, no less than, probably more than 2,875 persons would have died of the disease as against 2,202 who did die of it. But we must remember that there are still more than 2,200 Wisconsin men, women and children dying in the most promising years of life from this curable and preventable disease.

County Sanatoria

"The first remedy, in addition to personal hygiene and preventive measures we have advocated was a chain of county sanatoria to provide:

"1—An adequate number of beds for curable cases.

"2—Humanitarian care for the dying patients, and at the same time separation which would decrease family infections, especially among children, during their most susceptible years.

"Wisconsin has a very creditable chain of public sanatoria, 10 in all and 14 of them county institutions. "As a natural growth of the sanatorium movement and to provide institutional means of lessening the number of relapsed cases of tuberculosis, this association in 1913 sponsored the establishment of Tomahawk lake camp for convalescents. It is most gratifying to be able to report that the last legislature appropriated sufficient funds to permit doubling the capacity of the camp.

Public Health Nurses

"The second great instrumentality we initiated and sponsored throughout the state was the public health nursing service. Wisconsin was the first state to pass legislation permitting the employment of official county public health nurses. It was a few years later the first state to make such employment mandatory.

"The next major activity of far reaching social significance is the traveling clinic service, or free chest clinic. Since these clinics were established, 10,205 patients have been examined. Of these 1,929—nearly one in every five—were considered to have the disease, definitely or in suspected form. While our primary object is the discovery of tuberculosis, many other important conditions are found. Thus during the first nine and a half months of this year, 96 cases of heart disease, 1,027 of diseased tonsils, 81 of toxic goitre and 599 of simple goitre were recorded.

"Without publicity, our clinics would not attract so many patients

SOVIET OFFICIALS SEEK RESUMPTION OF TRADE WITH UNITED STATES

MOSCOW.—(By the Associated Press.)—Soviet officials indicated on Saturday that they expected official restoration of business relations with America in a very short time or at least the negotiation of some sort of trade agreement between the United States and soviet Russia.

The conference at Darien between the far eastern republic and Japan is regarded as the possible gateway through which soviet officers may find admission to America. The Moscow government is to participate in this conference unofficially, and it links up so closely with the Pacific problems which the Washington conference is considering that the bolshevik officials hope it will result in an invitation to soviet Russia to send representatives to Washington.

Maxim Litvinoff is mentioned as a possibility for the post of trade commissioner to the United States, or even ambassador. Ludwig Martens also is mentioned as a likely candidate for the American post in the event a trade agreement is reached or America extends recognition to soviet Russia.

Officials Puzzled

WASHINGTON.—(By the Associated Press.)—Statements of soviet officials in Moscow today indicating the imminence of negotiation of some sort of trade agreement with the United States, puzzled American officials who professed not to understand the reference. In the absence of detailed official advices they refused to comment on the situation.

FINGERPRINTS GIVE HINT OF STRUGGLE IN ARBUCKLE ROOM

Two Witnesses Tell of Seeing Miss Rappe Double up and Tear Her Clothes

DEFENSE EXPECTS TO CLOSE ITS EVIDENCE ON MONDAY

Finger Print Expert Under Fire of the Prosecution

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—The defense expects to close its presentation of evidence in the Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle case next Monday, it was announced Saturday night when court adjourned over the week-end. Finger prints bulked large in Saturday's proceedings. The prints in question were found on doors of rooms in the Hotel St. Francis where Arbuckle gave the party last September at which Virginia Rappe is said to have received fatal injuries at the comedian's hands.

Ignatius H. McCarthy, former investigator for the federal department of labor, was called as a finger print expert by the defense to controvert testimony offered by E. O. Heinrich of the University of California, a consulting criminologist. Heinrich had sworn that some prints on the door of the room where Miss Rappe was found injured were those of the defendant and that these and others indicated a struggle between Arbuckle and Miss Rappe.

McCarthy's qualifications as an expert were under fire from the prosecution when court adourned. He admitted he never had testified as such an expert before.

Among other witnesses Saturday were Philo McCullough, a motion picture actor of Hollywood, Calif., and Mrs. Florence Bates of Santa Anna, Calif., friends of Miss Rappe. Both testified they had seen Miss Rappe "double up" and tear at her clothing.

According to previous evidence Miss Rappe did this at the Arbuckle party.

ITALIAN STUDENTS IN DEMONSTRATION AGAINST FRANCE

Resent Remarks of Premier Briand Against the Italian Delegation

SEVERAL WOUNDED IN RIOT WHICH BREAKS OUT IN TURIN

Burn French Flag Publicly Amidst Hostile Exclamations

NAPLES.—Anti-French demonstrations which broke out in Turin Saturday night following publication of dispatches from Washington reporting a clash of words between Premier Briand of France and Senator Schanzer, head of the Italian delegation in America, spread to Naples, where several persons were wounded in a revolver duel between the police and the demonstrators.

Enraged over reading published reports of harsh words directed against the Italian delegation by the French premier, a band of demonstrators, consisting of the most part of students and fiscisti, paraded the principal streets of the city crying "Down with France." They then proceeded to attack the French consulate here, but here they were faced with a special detachment of 500 troops.

The most serious incident in connection with the demonstrations occurred when the mob found a French flag and burned it publicly amidst hostile exclamations against France.

FATHER MURPHY OF SENECA TO SPEAK TO KNIGHTS MONDAY

Rev. James Murphy, of Seneca, Wis., well-known pulpit orator, will speak Monday evening at a special meeting of the Knights of Columbus in the K. C. hall. His subject will be "Knighthood," and members of the order were urged Saturday night to make a special effort to be present. Father Murphy is a notable member of the Wisconsin priesthood by reason of a unique circumstance attaching to his undertaking this work. He was formerly a prominent attorney at Eau Claire, and both he and his partner, now Father Brown, gave up their profession to take orders.

"LADY KILLER" JAILED, DESERTION IS CHARGE

LIVINGSTON, Mont. — Walter Goodman, who came here five weeks ago from the east, was arrested on Saturday by Chief of Police Holt on a charge of wife desertion. Goodman has a wife and two children living in Minneapolis, it is alleged, he will be taken there for trial.

After Goodman was placed in the city jail here, several Livingston girls visited the jail and asked to see Goodman. Later in the day the young women showered Goodman with gifts of candy and fruit. Goodman who is 23 years old, is a "lady-killer," according to Chief of Police Holt.

PASTOR CAN BE REMOVED

WAUKESHA, Wis.—Declaring that a congregation has a right to remove its pastor, Judge C. A. Davison Saturday handed down a decision permitting the congregation of the St. Paul Evangelical Lutheran church, Oconomowoc, to remove Rev. W. P. Hass and H. A. Jaeger, a school teacher, connected with the parochial school of the church.

The congregation of 600 charged that the Rev. Hass was guilty of being unfaithful to his duties. Prior to Judge Davison's order, the board of arbitration of the congregation declared the Rev. Hass could not be removed on the petition presented.

FISH RESCUE WORK IS MAKING BETTER FISHING IN RIVER

Nearly Ninety Million Sunfish and Crappies Restored to the Main River

COMMERCIAL FISHERMEN ALSO SEE BENEFIT OF THE WORK

Annual Report of Superintendent Culler is Interesting

VALUE of the fish rescue work on the upper Mississippi river conducted by the bureau of fisheries, department of commerce, both to the hook and line fishermen and commercial fishermen, is demonstrated in the annual report of Superintendent C. F. Culler, just completed and forwarded to the department.

The past season was the most successful in the history of the rescue work, 178,100,161 fish being rescued from landlocked sloughs and pockets where they would have smothered in the winter, when the ponds froze over. Of this number $7,000,000 of over one-half of the total number saved, were crappies and sunfish, two of the most palatable fish obtainable in the United States.

Rough Fish Saved

Over 24,000,000 carp and buffalo, the fish sought by commercial fishermen, were seined from the landlocked sloughs and deposited in the main river, where they will have opportunity to grow to marketable size.

In 1918 only 639,000 sunfish were rescued, while this year, the total of this variety taken from the inland ponds and placed in the main river was 51,800,685. That hook and line fishermen in a year or two will enjoy wonderful sunfish and crappy fishing along the upper river is assured by the fish rescue officials.

A feature of Mr. Culler's annual report is the showing that the cost of rescuing fish during the past season was only 17 1-3 cents per thousand. Last year the cost was 21.7 cents.

Small Number Shipped

"Of the total number of fish rescued," said Mr. Culler in reviewing the work of the past year, "only twenty-nine hundredths of one percent were shipped away from the river to stock inland waters. One-fifth of the total number of fish shipped went to stock Wisconsin lakes and rivers. Eight carloads were sent out over the state and two carloads were given to the state conservation commission."

Fourteen crews were engaged in the fish rescue work during the past season. The territory seined extended from Lake Pepin to Bellevue, Ia. The best territory was the La Crosse district, from Dresbach to four miles below Lynxville, a distance of sixty-five miles. In this district alone 73,884,065 fish were rescued.

"As a result of the rescue work there has been a great improvement in bass fishing during the past two years," said Mr. Culler. "Other varieties will increase from year to year."

Urge Passage of Bill

The remarkable showing made by the fish rescue crews during the past season furnished a sound argument for congress to advance and pass the bill now pending, providing for location of a fish rescue headquarters station at La Crosse and extension of the rescue work in order to make a thorough cleanup of all landlocked sloughs along the river every year.

In making known the results of the work this year, Mr. Culler urges that all hook and line and commercial fishermen interested in this work urge his congressman and senator to help pass the bill now pending. Action is expected on the measure during the coming term of congress, which convenes in December.

WORLD ASSOCIATION PLAN VASTLY WIDENS FIELD OF CONFERENCE'S ACTIVITIES

NAVAL LIMITATION WILL BE TAKEN UP AGAIN THIS WEEK

American and British Experts Have Completed Details of Reduction Plan

CAPITAL SHIP BASIS FOR SOLUTION OF ALL PROBLEMS

Other Questions Settled Easily After Primary Agreement

WASHINGTON, D. C.—By The Associated Press.—The problem of naval limitation, left in the background while the far eastern negotiations are developing step by step the policies of the powers toward China, has been advanced to a point where it may soon resume a place of predominating interest in the arms conference.

It was said authoritatively that in the opinion of the spokesmen of the American government all questions relating to auxiliary craft are of collateral importance only, and can be settled easily once there is an agreement on capital ships.

China Problem Solved

Another of China's problems reached the point of a virtual agreement in principle during the day when the delegates all agreed there should be a withdrawal of the foreign postal machinery as soon as conditions warrant; and a sub-committee, headed by Senator Lodge, a declaration of principle under which each of the powers would investigate conditions for itself and withdraw when it considered it practical to do so.

The report is to be presented to the full committee Monday. At the same time another sub-committee will present for approval a resolution declaring also for a gradual abolition of the extra territorial rights in China as soon as China's judicial machinery will warrant the change. It is expected that the dispatch of an international commission of jurists to China to study the situation will be recommended.

Harding Plan Discussed

President Harding's suggestion for a continuance of the conference plan in international relationships was a question of absorbing interest in private conversations between delegates. Few of the delegates would comment on it publicly, and the only hint as to the possible attitude of the other nations came from M. Viviani, head of the French delegation, who endorsed the suggestion, saying it was not only "a high thought" but a practical one, and from a British spokesman, who declared that an "association of nations" must be approached carefully until the attitude of the American congress had been expressed.

G. EGGENBERGER AND HIS WIFE NARROWLY ESCAPE INJURY HERE

Riding down Jackson street Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Eggenberger narrowly escaped injury when an automobile skidded into their buggy at the intersection of Eighth and Jackson streets. The vehicle was slightly damaged but the occupants escaped without injury. The machine did not stop.

AUCTION OLD SHIPS

WASHINGTON—Fifteen ships of the old navy will be put on the auction block soon, it was announced Saturday night by the navy department. Several of them helped make American history, among them being the cruiser Brooklyn, flagship of Rear Admiral William S. Schley during the battle of Santiago. Others are the cruiser Columbia, which, in her prime, was one of the fastest ships on the sea; the battleship Maine which replaced the battleship of that name destroyed in Havana harbor; the battleship Missouri launched in 1901, the cruiser Memphis, now a wreck on the San Domingan coast, and the torpedo boat Dale, which recently has been known as the Oriole, while serving as headquarters of the Baltimore naval militia.

WAIVE HOLIDAY RECESS

WASHINGTON.—(By the Associated Press.)—Members of several delegations to the Washington conference informally suggested Saturday night that any thought of adjourning the sessions for the Christmas holidays be abandoned in the expectation that by adopting such a course the deliberations could be definitely concluded by the end of December.

GREAT SURPRISE TO OBSERVERS IN NEW MOVE OF U. S.

Had Thought Armament Meeting Nearing the End of its Labors

MAY BRING IN MATTERS HITHERTO NOT TOUCHED

Predict Arrival of Lloyd George and Plea from Germany

(BY FRANK H. SIMONDS)
(Copyright, 1921.)

WASHINGTON. — Two facts dominate the history of the second week of the Washington conference; namely, the Anglo-French row, which was not unexpected, and President Harding's Friday comment on the possible broadening of the scope of the conference itself, which is in reality the most striking single circumstance since Mr. Hughes' opening speech.

As to the Anglo-French row, everybody has already taken its measure and it may now be dismissed so far as it has American significance. On the other hand, the president's startling proposal may lead to a revison of all estimates alike of time and results so far as the conference is concerned.

Widens Scope Gretly

Between the president's later proposal and Mr. Hughes' opening prospectus it is obvious that there is very wide difference. Under Mr. Hughes' impulse the conference has been working on the subject of the limitation of armaments, with the idea that specific and definite agreement here would be the main contribution of the gathering, and since this objective was simple and restricted there has been an expectation that Christmas would see the work done and the delegates gone.

As it now stands, however, there seems every reason to believe that the conference will take on a new aspect more thoroughly reminiscent of Paris and that we may have a very considerable measure of European affairs brought in. One of the most immediate of these possibilities is that Mr. Lloyd George may after all find a reason to come here and an opportunity commensurate with his political necessities. Such an opportunity has been lacking ever since the first day of the conference because there has been no place where he could be put in appropriately, indeed aside from M. Briand's one night stand, the Washington conference has had a single character, and that has been Mr. Hughes.

The president's suggestion comes as a profound surprise. It opens horizons far more considerable than any one had expected would be explored, and it may be many days before we can see what boundaries are actually to be set what may easily become a totally different sort of international gathering from that which has been descried and expected in very recent days.

U. S. Had Been Dodging Responsibility

Up to the present moment, the Washington conference has resolutely set itself against any intermingling in European affairs. It has successfully resisted a number of British, French and Italian attempts to interest the United States in European problems. The result has been a profound disappointment to every European, although this disappointment finds little expression in the public press either at home or abroad. Moreover, even in the case of Asia, the United States has, to a surprising extent, avoided assuming a leadership which would carry with it similar assumption of responsibilities.

If, now, however, the Washington conference is to be transformed as seems at least possible, following President Harding's suggestion of yesterday, we are bound to have Lloyd George come here to reopen the British case against French policy on the continent; we are certain to have Germany to come here to ask the United States to act as arbiter between Germany and her conquerors. Indeed, save for Russia, which is specifically listed as uninvited by President Harding, it is difficult to see why anybody in Europe should stay away.

To Revive League?

In addition, the question of the league of nations seems likely to be-

DOMESTIC SCIENCE LUNCHEON SPLENDID SUCCESS AT HIGH

Six Boys of Father Flannigan's School of Homeless Boys Give Entertainment

RUSHFORD, —(Special)—At the last week Friday's entertainment put on by the city schools at the school building, the sum of $22.00 was cleared from the proceeds of the lunch served by the Domestic Science department of the school. This money was turned over to the High School Athletic Association. One of the largest crowds ever seen out to any school affair given to the public, filled the H. S. assembly-room to it's capacity and also the corridors.

At the Opera last Tuesday evening six boys, all students at The Father Flannigan School for homeless boys which is situated at Omaha, Neb., gave a fine program of songs, readings recitations which was fully appreciated by the large audience gathered to hear them. The boys were accompanied by a young gentleman, a friend of the school; who cares for them upon their trip into the different states to obtain funds for the maintenance of the school.

The Scottish Rite Masons of this city who recently formed a Club bearing that name, recently gave a banquet to twenty of the club members and their ladies served at the Northwestern Hotel in this city which consisted of a five-course turkey dinner. The Peterson, Minn. band boys furnished the music to which—after the supper—all enjoyed dancing in the dining-room converted for the evening into a good-sized dancing-hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ekern, bride and bridegroom of last week, have leased rooms in the Gilbert Gunderson residence for the winter and will soon commence housekeeping. Their many friends are glad to know that these popular young people intend to remain in Rushford. The bride was formerly Miss Anna Dahl. Several prenuptial gatherings were held in her honor; one of which was a parcel-shower given at the home of Mrs. J. Anderson of this city. The guest of honor received many beautiful gifts.

Miss Anna Axness, a resident of Hart, near here, who will spend the winter in Fergus Falls, was given a surprise party recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Volkman, of the Hart neighborhood. Supper was served at eleven o'clock p. m. The evening had been spent in playing various games and dancing.

The next meeting of the Women's Welfare league of this city will be held at the public library Tuesday afternoon, November 29, at which time an interesting program will be offered by several members of the league and it is hoped that one of the Rushford American Legion men will speak for a short time upon what the legion has done and is doing to further education. The entire program will be in line with educational week, as outlined in nearly every paper in the country. The Women's league invites visitors to its meetings at all times and urges every woman of Rushford and vicinity to become a member.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Cutsforth of Plainview, who have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gray, parents of Mrs. Cutsforth, have returned home. Mr. Cutsforth went home last week, Mrs. Cutsforth and their infant daughter going last Saturday, accompanied by Mr. Gray, who will remain for a short visit.

Superintendent and Mrs. P. K. Cesander entertained at a six o'clock dinner recently, at which time the school faculty and Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Habberstad were guests.

Among those who came from the Winona Teachers' college for the Thanksgiving holidays were Raymond and Anna Eichsen and Leone Schoonover of this city.

The Misses La Vaughn Caswell and Ruth Caswell and Ruth Nestorf, accompanied by Mr. J. Clayton, went up to Spring Valley last Friday noon to attend the Y. P. conference held at that place Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The two young ladies went as delegates from the Rushford Presbyterian Sunday school. Mr. Clayton being superintendent of that Sunday school, went as all the superintendents and pastors of the churches are expected to attend ex-officio.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Paulson of Nina, Mont., arrived in Rushford recently, to spend the winter months with Mrs. Paulson's mother, Mrs. O. Laugen of Brooklyn.

James, the son of Mr. and Mrs. and Mrs. Conrad Eggen recently celebrated his eighth birthday anniversary by inviting seven of his playmates and schoolmates to spend the afternoon playing games and having a good time. Supper was served to the guests.

REAL EYES FOR THE BLIND

Science has advanced a stage nearer the solution of the problem of blindness. By transplanting the eyes of living or newly-killed animals to blind animals, the sight of the latter has been restored!

The transplanting of eyes has been tried before, but owing to the fact that the eyes so transplanted were stitched into position, the experiments were not a success. Silk stitching proved too strong for the fine substance of the eye, and it killed the nerve.

A new method has recently been tried by a certain famous doctor. Eyes were transplanted as before, but not stitching was used, the nerve ends being carefully joined to each other. The eyelids of the blind animals were then closed, and left so for a day. At the end of the day the nerves were found to have fused together.

After three or four weeks under this treatment each eye was able to react to light, and in the case of fish and other forms of life sight was restored!

In the case of a blind rat which had new eyes given to it, the pupil reacted to light and darkness, and the movements of the creature became bolder than before. The animal actually jumped over holes and sprang into its cage.

Britain's Sacrifice

If the Hughes program of naval disarmament goes through—as is held practically certain—there will be at least one tremendously important collateral result aside from reduction of taxes and the possible minimization of the probability of a war in the Pacific.

That result will be the surrender by Great Britain of her position as Mistress of the Seas. How important a change this will be can, perhaps, be calculated from the fact that sea supremacy has been maintained by Great Britain continuously since 1588, when the Invincible Armada sent against England by Philip of Spain was destroyed and Spanish sea-power finally broken. British sea supremacy, from that time on, broke the grip of Spain on the continent, mastered Napoleon, extended British dominion around the world and, finally, gave the allies the indispensable factor needed to beat William II of Germany. There is no doubt that history would have been vastly different were it not that Britannia ruled the waves.

Under the Hughes program the sea-power, not only of England but of the whole world-circling British Empire will be reduced to a bare equality with that of the United States. It is a big drop, relatively, from the navy equal to that of the next two most powerful naval nations which was the British standard for years before the world war. Only the impossibility of maintaining her lead upon her diminished resources, against the limitless wealth of the United States, probably could have brought Britain to relinquish that control, so vital to the empire under old-style ideas of national policy, which she has held for over 300 years. But on the whole Britain has made a rather graceful virtue of her necessity, and has entered into the new order of things in the world with as co-operative and sincere a spirit, probably, as any of the powers sitting in the game with everything to gain and nothing to lose.

What will be the effect upon the course of world history, one must wonder, with sea supremacy of any single power no longer a factor in the reckoning? A good many accepted ideas of international law perhaps may be revised because of the disappearance of the foundation upon which they stood. To cite one notable example, there is the whole body of international custom relating to contraband, prize taking and prize courts, search and seizure, blockade, etc. Much of the precedent upon which cases involving these matters have been decided rests upon the ability of the British fleet to enforce British decisions in the past. Other nations have seen them differently, but have been unable to make good their points. The United States, for instance, has always contended for the freedom of the seas to neutrals, and the right of trade with belligerents unless ports were actually under physical blockade. The British have steadfastly refused recognition of this principle because it deprived the British fleet of much of its effect in war. What will be her attitude, one wonders, should the point rise again—when there is another power in the world, and possibly an additional combination of powers, either of which could successfully challenge the British fleet and perhaps close the high seas to the commerce upon which England lives?

It will make a difference, but there is small reason to doubt that the difference will not be detrimental to the British Empire. After all, the end of British command of the seas is not so much a danger to Britain as it is a security to other nations. Britain will remain a power of the first rank; the British government and people will retain a compelling voice in world affairs. If the voice must, perhaps, be modulated to a tone of persuasion rather than command there are reasons why it may prove better, in the long run, for Britain as well as the rest of the world. Command of the seas is a temptation to injustice which England has generally—but not always—resisted. It is better for the peace of the world and the welfare of mankind—including Britain and her dominions—that there be no overload of the common highways of commerce. If Britain is no longer the greatest on the sea, there will be none greater. It points along the way toward the ideal of a democracy of nations toward which the world is moving.

PICTURE a train with 829,722 freight cars.

That was what all American railroads loaded with freight and moved during the first week of November. That would make a big train. By squeezing some, the whole population of United States could travel in it, standing up. This great number of freight car loadings was 2,998 cars more than were loaded in the corresponding week of 1919.

General business conditions go up or down with freight traffic. The railroad figures show that better times are approaching steadily.

Harding

A GENTLEMAN with an adding machine brain figures out that it costs the American people less than one cent each to pay President Harding's salary and total expenses for a year. Congress costs eighteen times as much. This is a small amount for the men who serve as general manager and board of directors for that greatest corporation, United States government, whose assets are about $220,000,000,000. You and I are the stockholders. Sometimes it's hard to see the dividends, but usually we can tell that we are being levied on for deficits.

Dissatisfied

THE driest place in the world is Payta, Peru. It expects no rain until at least 1923. If it rains oftener than once in two years down there, the natives get scared. Last February it had its first shower since 1913. Despite the dry climate, seven different kinds of plant life manage to exist around Payta.

Life, the greatest mystery, is remarkable for two things: Its stubborn and tenacious fight against death; its power to adapt itself to almost any kind of environment.

CHURCH NEWS

Furnished by the Church News Association

Students meeting recently in Chicago, and approving aims of the Washington conference, have already started to bring to the authorities of American colleges the need to offer instruction in problems of national and international life, so that graduates may know how to correct existing evils. To force this plan upon the attention of educators a deputation of students is planned, and with approval of authorities in education, will visit colleges and secure action if possible. At Chicago two organizations were effected, one senior, one junior. At the head of the former is Dr. Robert L. Kelley, and of the latter Charles Denby, Jr. The Chicago meeting brought together 259 men from forty-three colleges. Some were Catholics, some Jews, but most colleges represented were Protestant controlled and supported, with a few state institutions in the list. On one day Mr. A. C. Monahan, director of the Catholic Bureau of Education, presided. Efforts are now to be made to get into touch with student organizations in England, France, Italy, China and Japan to work with them for world reform, especially in support of disarmament plans.

Announcement is made that into the new Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, can be introduced the sound amplifiers, such as were used on Armistice day, and enable every worshipper to hear every word distinctly. This can be done without placing unsightly apparatus on the walls. The nave, which is soon to be built, will provide a structure that is, from east to west, a total length of 601 feet, next to St. Peter's in Rome, the longest cathedral in the world. It is now proposed to complete the nave as a thank offering for the achievements of the Washington conference in efforts to bring in world peace. The cost, without either main tower or the two smaller western towers, will be $3,000,000.

Lutherans of the Missouri Synod, a national body and not confined to the state named, are promoting the plan of six o'clock religious services in churches on Christmas morning. Two years ago a few tried the plan, doing so with the fear that the early hour might fail, and that men might not attend. The plan succeeded and grew, and for the approaching Christmas a general appeal has been sent out that all Lutheran churches hold services at this hour. Some have even tried five o'clock, and that hour has also succeeded. Lutherans state that only a little publicity is needed to fill any church.

Presbyterians of the northern states are forging ahead financially regardless of hard times. Their total gifts to all general causes in 1919 were $5,560,000. In 1920 they were $10,500,000, and Presbyterians have just resolved to raise in 1922 the sum of $14,500,000. These sums do not include support of local churches. Such support jumped in five years ending in 1921 from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000. A meeting of Presbyterian authorities just held was so optimistic that talk was general in the effect that by 1925 their general gifts will reach $25,000,000 a year.

Christian forces of the United States have just joined in plans to take education and hospitals to the people of Santo Domingo and Hayti, where American political forces have been dominant for some time. Presbyterians and Methodists of the North, with some help from United Brethren, have purchased a Santo Domingo city headquarters at a cost of $50,000, and quite near to it, in another building, have opened a hospital. Two nurses for the latter have just sailed from New York. The building is to be devoted to social work, and to it the 1,500 marines stationed there will be invited. The work is, however, for civilians and not for the marines exclusively, marines having their own chaplain.

CONFERENCE, PREOCCUPIED WITH SHIPS, GIVES JAPS FREE REIN IN FAR EAST

(BY FRANK H. SIMONDS)

While the moment for a complete appraisal of the work of the Washington Conference has not yet come, we can see certain things clearly now, the first of which is that the practical achievement of this gathering will be comprehended exclusively in a reduction of naval armaments.

The primary question that had to be answered when the conference opened was that of scope and purpose. Before Mr. Hughes spoke on Saturday, November 12, the conference of Washington occupied in the minds of the world a position as interesting and significant as did the Paris conference three years ago. Was it the purpose of Mr. Hughes to take up the work as it has fallen from the hands of the Paris statesmen? Were we going back to the League, back to the European problems? At least many voices clamored for such a course.

On the other side was raised an equally insistent question: Were we to put our influence, our forces behind a project to reorganize the Far East, to restrain Japanese ambition and aid in the restoration of Chinese independence?

All For Naval Cut

Mr. Hughes, in his opening speech, avoided both questions. He made no reference to Europe. He dismissed the Far East with that scant mention which henceforth robbed it of real significance. On one sheet and one alone Mr. Hughes consolidated all his energy. He did not even undertake to disarm the world. He specifically, definitely, dramatically sought to limit the sea power of the three great naval nations of the planet. That was all.

Here, then, since Mr. Hughes deliberately chose to make it so was the sole objective of the Washington conference. No one can mistake this fact, even though its importance may be exaggerated or improperly minimized. For better or for worse Mr. Hughes decided we should talk ships, and ships will be the subject alike of the conference and of the tangible agreements that emerge.

Now, one has to appreciate in estimating the situation exactly the problem to be faced. The United States has undertaken to give up if not actual supremacy on the high seas the exercise of that power indisputably hers, which would have made her in a short space of years beyond challenge on the eastern and western oceans.

British Accept

We have given up that power, potential if not actual, without compensation. Did we desire compensation? That question remains to be debated hereafter. In substance we have said to Great Britain, still the greatest sea power, but by consequence of the extent and expense of the last war unable to retain that position in competition with us: "We are willing to concede you temporary superiority and permanent equality provided you will agree to a common programme, preceded by a ten year holiday." The British have accepted the proposal. Not only were they bound to accept it, but it represents for them an unattainable victory in that it saves them from a losing race.

We have said to Japan: "Accept our standards of relative strength on the high seas," and substantially the Japanese will accept our standards because for them sea power is defensive and not offensive, and the more our fleets are reduced and the more British fleets are reduced the safer Japan is, not alone from attack by our fleet or the British fleet, but also from challenge as she applies her policy on the Asiatic continent. Thus Japan, too, has won a victory in the naval discussion.

Now, what of the United States? We fundamentally have agreed to resign supremacy upon the seas of the world at a time when no nation and no two nations could challenge us had we chosen to adopt the old British ratio of building against the two naval powers nearest to us. But in resigning this power no one can mistake the fact that Mr. Hughes has followed the wishes of his fellow countrymen. We had no desire as a people to dominate the high seas at the risk of eventual conflict and at the price of enormously expanding naval budgets. We have given up something we didn't want, speaking for the mass of the American people.

Not to Make Peace

Now, the first practical question that must be asked is whether the limitation of naval armaments represents a gain for the peace of the world. As I have pointed out often enough in preceding articles, the question of armaments has precious little to do with the causes of war. It is an American delusion that the existence of armed forces or the prevalence of armed ships brings war. Wars are caused by totally different factors. They are precipitated by the conflict of rival aspirations or conceptions or interests among the peoples of the world. The existence of the German army was not the cause of the last war. The existence in the German mind of certain hopes and certain fears was the factor which was responsible for the war.

In limiting the armed strength of the world at sea, Mr. Hughes has not directly reduced the dangers of war. Such contribution as has been made or will be made is indirect. Certainly if an international conference can meet in Washington and debate great questions and separate after amicable discussion having set their signatures to a document which witnesses to international concord the gain must be clear. The gain, however, is not a consequence of the document signed, but of the feeling engendered during the debate and testified to by the character of the document.

Must Express Real Will

All of which throws us back upon the second phase of the Washington conference, the Far Eastern question. When the last document adopted at the Washington conference is signed, the Far Eastern question will remain a menace to world peace unless such declarations of policy toward China as are embodied in the document represent the national will of the signatory powers.

Putting the thing concretely: Japan is going to sign a great many undertakings or affirm fidelity to a large number of principles. The United States has abstained from any effort to impose its views upon Japan's Far Eastern views, it is understood. Such abstention is wise in my judgment because in the last analysis it would require force, to impose these views and the people of the United States would no have fought for the integrity of China, for the open door, or for the dissolution of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

Mr. Hughes might possibly have led the majority of the people of this country to a policy of force, in the Far East—of force invoked to protect China—by a campaign of education and a long continued open and acrimonious debate with Japan. Short of the use of force, however, no settlement was possible, except in so far as it was voluntarily consented to by Japan.

We have to face the Far Eastern question as it is. In China, in Manchuria, in Mongolia, in Eastern Siberia Japan has done certain things. They are neither better nor worse than the great western powers have done, but they have been done more recently and more systematically. To continue doing these things means to destroy the independence of China. It means ultimately an attempt on the part of Japan to exercise complete political dominion over the Celestial kingdom, now becoming a very planetary republic in name at least.

Gives Japan Free Hand

If Japan continues to do those things the Far Eastern question so far from improving, will worsen. There is nothing in the agreement that will be signed at Washington which will or can affect this fact. On the contrary, the limitation of naval armaments constitutes the presentation to Japan of a clear opportunity to exploit China if she chooses. In agreeing to the reduction of our naval programme and the scrapping of some of our best ships we are agreeing to give Japan a free hand; we are removing the last restraint which we may possess, and we are asking the British similarly to abandon such restraint as they may have.

After the programme proposed by Mr. Hughes is adopted—and I believe that substantially it will be adopted—neither Great Britain nor ourselves separately or jointly will be in a position to venture to coerce Japan, if Japanese policy follows the pathway which it has followed in recent years.

This is the risk. It is a plain risk. It is an unescapable risk unless we are willing to bear the consequence of competitive naval armament, a consequence which represents increased taxation and may lead to eventual war.

Eventually, the success or failure of the Washington conference, so far as the Far East is concerned, will depend entirely upon the direction which Japanese policy takes hereafter. No American should permit himself to be deluded into the notion that any of the documents to be signed as to the Far East has the smallest value in itself or that there remains the smallest chance of its enforcement after the programme of naval limitation has been adopted.

Depends Upon Japan

It depends upon Japan herself whether she will interpret her engagements undertaken here honorably or wisely. If she does, the Washington conference will prove a landmark in the history of the Far East. If she does not, the Washington conference will be a meaningless gesture. It may even be more than that—a dangerous experiment in disarmament since we shall eventually have to arm again provided Japanese aggressions take on a magnitude which makes a menace to our own country.

From the American point of view the opening speech of Mr. Hughes gave promise of a great victory. The American press and the American public have remained in the empire of that first impression. Mr. Hughes' own view has been set forth again and again that in the long process of the adjustment of international relations one could proceed only step by step and a first step was necessary. Such a first step he conceived to be the limitation of naval armaments, and from that step he believed we might progress safely and surely.

The view of Europe is totally different. The Washington conference will seem to Europe as great a failure as the Paris conference did to the United States. The limitation of naval strength will not even interest the French or the Italians, while German cynicism is already unmistakable. The American notion that wars are caused by armaments finds no European echo. Moreover, Europe knows that our people have not yet understood that there will be no great reduction in taxation or expenditure in consequence of the limitation of naval programmes. We shall avoid the huge increase in naval expenditures which would follow competition in building, but that is the single practical benefit.

Us. S. Moving Back?

America sees the world disarming. Europe sees those dangers, which constitute for it the causes of war undiminished and unaffected. Europe hoped that the Washington conference would be marked by an American return to active participation in world affairs and in European affairs. Europe now recognizes that the Washington conference will mark a further retreat; that we are still moving away from Europe. Not toward it.

I have never shared the views of Mr. Wells, and many other English writers who more or less belong to that school of thought, that the Washington conference could prove a turning point either in world history or in American relations to Europe. But there is no mistaking the fact that this hope or delusion supplied the dominating element in the thought of most, if not all of the journalists, who have come here from abroad. Not all of them have perceived the fallacy which moved them deeply, but none of them can permanently escape the realization that the United States has once more decluded the effort to entangle her on, if one chooses to view it otherwise, has remained deaf to the appeals coming to it from European shores.

Mr. Hughes believes that if the great powers agree to begin to disarm on sea they will presently agree to begin to disarm on land, that in fact the habit of agreeing will grow and expand until, step by step, we arrive at a peaceful world. All his policy and all his course in this conference were predicated upon this faith. In this view he is in agreement with the mass of the American people who are even more willing than the secretary of state to believe that the limitation of armaments means peace.

All Disputes to Remain

But when the conference has adjourned after fixing the ratio of naval strength and describing the number of ships to be scrapped and the length of time in which the governments' shipyards of the world shall be idle, there will remain all the major questions to be settled and the grievous danger today is that the American people will be deluded, as no other people can be, into the belief that war has been made less likely by the Washington conference.

A war between the United States and Japan has been made less likely because we have retired from the Far East. We have resigned the power to coerce Japan and thus to protect China. The exercise of such power would have led to war. The abandonment of such power will lead to Japanese aggression or it will lead to a modification of Japanese policy toward China precisely as Japan chooses and wills.

The agreement with Great Britain to limit shipbuilding immediately saves the British from the necessity of financial outlays which they cannot safely undertake or the resignation of the position of first sea power, which they have occupied for centuries. All things considered we have agreed in the one way that we could to leave Great Britain substantially the first sea power of the world for the immediate future at least. There never was any danger of war with Great Britain. Only the most stupid of all policies could have led to a competition in shipbuilding. What remains to be seen is whether as a result of our resignation of supremacy on the sea which was within our grasp Anglo-American relations will improve or worsen.

In short, the practical result of the Washington Conference will be a reduction in naval programs and therefore the pruning of naval estimates. The taxpayers will not pay less, but they will not have to pay more. But the conditions of war and peace will remain the same in the world except in so far as the Washington Conference may have succeeded or may have failed in promoting a friendlier spirit between the countries represented there. This is the fact. To believe otherwise is to invite another awakening such as followed the adjournment of the Paris Conference.

A failure the Washington Conference will not be in any obvious and direct way such as might have been feared before the first session. Nothing like a rupture has ever been even conceivable. Most of the clashes which have occupied space in the newspapers have been at least semi-imaginary and never actually serious. It is almost to be regretted that the desire on every side to appear friendly has sometimes prevented the pressing home of points which might usefully have been adopted. Unmistakably we shall have many, conceivably too many, questions postponed. Beyond all else it is a mistake to think of the Washington Conference as likely to settle anything. It has avoided some things which it was advisable, desirable, necessary to avoid. At best it may prove a prelude to better international relations and new judgments. At worst it is a novel experiment. Mr. Wilson tried to do everything at once, Mr. Hughes at Washington has tried to do one thing and no more. Mr. Wilson believed in idealistic principles, Mr. Hughes believes in tangible things. The Conference at Washington has belonged to Mr. Hughes. His success has been more immediately complete than that of Mr. Wilson. It remains to be seen whether it will be more lastingly significant.

TICKET SALE OPENS FOR THE SHRINERS MINSTREL SHOW

Capacity houses are predicted for the Shrine clubs' "Jollies of 1922" and it is advisable to make your reservation at once. The public is assured that they will get their money's worth in good wholesome entertainment. Those who have watched the progress of the rehearsals are loud in their praise of the histrionic ability displayed by every member of the cast.

With just a few rehearsals left and everyone bubbling over with pep the work of smoothing out the rough spots will soon be over. The cast became so enthusiastic over the work that they have even requested an extra rehearsal. Their one big aim is to please their audiences.

It is an all star cast of singers, dancers and comedians. It only remains now for the people of La Crosse to show their appreciation by filling the theater both nights and at the same time have an evening of real pleasure. If you have not secured seats make this your motto.—"Reserve your tickets today."

Sugar Industry Fundamentally Sound Says Babson

Famous Statistician Favors Sugar Stocks as Long Swing Speculation.

Much interest is manifest in sugar today, particularly on the weak side. The worst is over, however, and the commodity is rapidly becoming readjusted. A year and a half ago, raw sugar was selling for 22½c a pound—the most exorbitant price in modern history. Hysterical buying of both commodity and security resulted. Suddenly it became evident that no shortage existed; that the invisible supply was in reality of enormous proportions. There could be but one result of such speculation. Demoralization immediately followed. Prices in February, 1921 declined to below 4c per pound. The readjustment was wholly in keeping with the fundamentals and the inevitable law of action and reaction. It usually follows that the higher a commodity goes, the more severe is the reaction.

What is the world status at present with raw sugar selling around 5c. One point stands out prominently. The world production is not adequate to meet the potential demand. Remember that before the war, Europe produced nearly 50% of the world's sugar, practically 9,000,000 tons of the 18,000,000 tons. During the past few years, European output has been less than 3,500,000 tons annually, or 61% under the normal figure. Europe is not recovering notwithstanding the curtailed per capita consumption, in proportion to her needs. We are still exporting tremendous quantities, more than the record volume of a year ago, and 100% more than in 1913. Until a more self-sustaining basis is reached, a high volume of exports will be maintained.

Cuba took upon her shoulders the burden of counteracting dwindling European production. The pinnacle of the great expansion occurred in 1920—the unpsychological moment. It takes a year to produce sugar, but the depression swept upon us in a few short months. The huge profits made by Cuban growers were practically wiped out and the timely function of the Sugar Commission probably prevented a more drastic collapse of the market and more serious financial difficulties. All eyes are focused on the unprecedented stocks in Cuba—now close to 1,100,000 tons, against an average during the past three years of only 283,000 tons. Do not ignore the fact, however, that stocks of sugar in this country are abnormally low. Imports to date average 440,000 tons under the volume of a year ago. Usually at this time of the year the bulk of the sugar crop is in this country and not in Cuba. The low domestic juvisible supply will inevitably cause marked inroads in the Cuban stocks during the next month or two. Moreover, the financial setback to the sugar producer is not without effect. The present price of sugar is close to if not below the cost of replacement. It is not surprising, therefore, that the trend of production is downward.

The 1921-22 Cuban crop promises only 3,000,000 tons—a decline of 23% from last year. The world output aggregates barely 15,500,000 tons, as compared with 18,500,000 tons before the war—a decline of 16%. An even greater curtailment is entirely probable. Keeping in mind underlying conditions, and present stocks the prospective new crop should not prove burdensome or a drug on the market. Stocks of the leading sugar companies meanwhile have dropped from a high of 99 in April, 1920 to 27½ the present quotation.

I do not predict an immediate recovery but certainly believe that this is not a time to practically give away the commodity—or the stocks of reliable sugar companies. You will in all probability pay more for both next year.

General business is improving slowly but surely. The Babsonchart index shows our present position but 17% below normal which augurs well for Christmas business.

INSECT-EATING PLANTS

Certain plants eat flesh.

A good many of these flesh-eating plants belong to the family of Bladderworts, which are plants that live in water and have little bladders which in springtime rise to the surface of the water.

These bladders have one entrance, which is closed by valves and can only be entered from the outside. Insects alight on these bladders and force their way through this entrance. Once inside they are prisoners without the slightest hope of escape. They may live for hours or days, but finally they die and are digested by the plant.

There is another plant of the flesh-eating species, which is found in Northern Europe and North America. It is known as the Sundew, and in this case the leaves are the trap for catching the guileless insect.

The leaves lie on the ground and are like a trough, and very stickey. As soon as an insect gets on to one of them it is firmly held by the sticky matter.

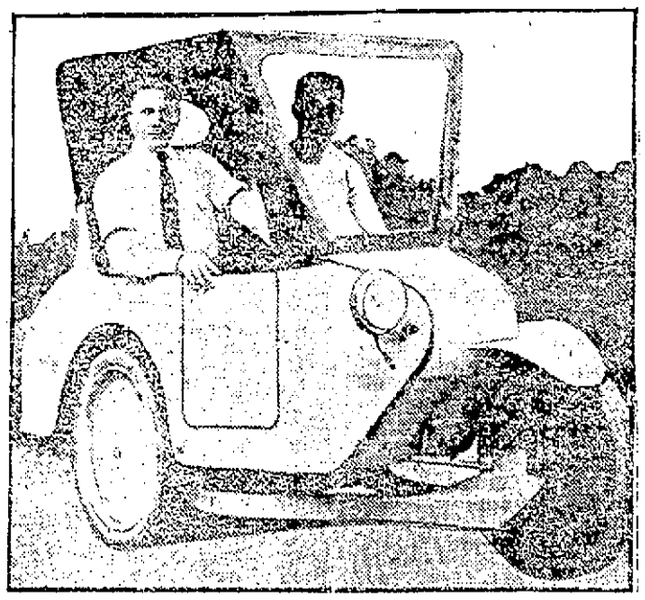

The edges then begin to turn up and eventually curl over the victim and imprison it. A day later, if the insect be small, the leaf uncurls, having digested the prey.

Lines to Be Remembered

A word that has been said may be unsaid—it is but air. But when a deed is done it cannot be undone, nor can our thoughts reach out to all the mischiefs that may follow.—Henry W. Longfellow.

A soft answer doesn't turn away as much wrath as a hard look.

PARK YOUR CAR IN THE PARLOR

You can do it if you have one of these two-passenger autos—no, it's not a motorcycle—invented by a Springfield, Mass., man. It only weighs 150 pounds, does thirty miles an hour, seventy-five miles to a gallon of gasoline, and is so narrow it can be pushed through an ordinary doorway.

HARD FIGHT TO THE HEADWATERS

In the absence of a stream to reach the spawning grounds, the salmon has some hard traveling and some painful experience, but all the same they persist until they attain their object. When salmon are going up a river, they nearly all have a white patch on their noses, where they have hit themselves against rocks, when attempting to leap some rapid or small waterfall. Professor Seton in "Wanderings of a Naturalist," points out that the fish must hurt themselves a good deal when attempting those leaps, as they sometimes lose direction and fall with a thud on to a rock. The fish which seems to be most successful in gaining the high and calm waters are those which bore their way through the rapids, instead of making many and often fruitless attempts to leap them.

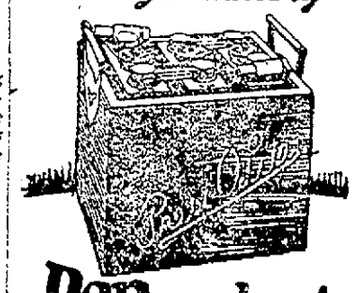

Trees Know Winter

The great buds of the horse chestnut have a most elaborate arrangement for the winter protection of the delicate parts within, says the American Forestry Magazine. The baby flower cluster is covered by the downy growth of the undeveloped leaves. The latter are surrounded by the tough, hard scale, and these are varnished over to keep out the water.

The Woman Who Doubts

It's difficult to make a woman who washes, irons, cooks, sweeps, dusts, takes care of children and sews for the family believe the man who has an office job works hard.—Atchison Globe.

INVESTMENTS

Note: This is the tenth of a series of articles on investments prepared for the Batavian National Bank by W. E. Walker. Another will appear next Sunday.

"This is an easy and absolutely safe method of investing according to our plan which is the result of years of study and experience," says the blue-eyed stock salesman firmly. And he says it so earnestly and supports his contentions with such obviously reasonable and clear diagrams and charts that it takes little imagination to feel the actual touch of the currency to be so easily realized from the enterprise he promotes.

There is one reliable way of determining definitely, however, just how sound are the salesman's statements of fact or fiction. Obtain the information outlined in the following paragraph yourself and then go over it carefully in a conference with your banker.

Obtain the name of the company and the salesman and the total amount of the issue. Is the stock, if it is stock, given for property, good will or patents? If so, how much of it is so given? What are the entire proceeds from stock sales to be used for? Is the salesman taking Liberty bonds in part or whole payment? If so, at what price? How much cash is the company in immediate need of? What is the par value of its stock? What is its selling price? What is the company's selling expense? What are its present net earnings? Obtain a copy of the company's latest financial statement. Obtain the names of the officers of the organization and their former occupations.

It is a favorite means of such salesmen to support their contentions with testimonials of presumably prominent trade journals which, they hesitate to mention, are published primarily for the purpose of aiding them in their schemes to separate the public from its money.

They tell you that their bonds have never failed to pay interest regularly since they have been in existence. It is well to remember, however, that interest never fails while bonds are on the market even if they have to take part of the principal to pay the interest. It is after the issue of bonds is disposed of that interest payments may be discontinued.

And the promoter of fake securities knows crowd psychology and how to use it for his own success. He often employes many artificial means to get a group of individuals coming his way, for he knows that the rush carries others right along.

There is probably not a man but who has done some things in a crowd, or when urged on friends, that he would never have done in his sane moments alone. The salesmen know that one man sold completely becomes a booster and helps sell the next man and the more they sell, the more completely they themselves become sold on the proposition. In money matters it is never safe to follow the crowd, nor safe to purchase on the boom.

The more heated the stock salesman becomes and the more intense grows his argument, the more firm should be moulded your conviction to consult your banker about the investment first before taking a step.

Watch Your Tooth-Brush

If Properly Sterilized, Your Tooth-Brush is Your Best Friend. If Not, it is Your Worst Enemy

Almost everybody is careful in the selection of the proper tooth-brush and the correct dentifrice. But at this point, precaution usually ends. Between the times it is used, the tooth-brush is exposed to the open air, gathering disease germs and bacteria. Furthermore, in its use, it gathers bacteria and food particles from the mouth. Without proper disinfection and sterilization, the tooth-brush thus becomes an agent that returns these bacteria and disease germs to the mouth. A slight abraision of the gums, cheeks or tongue offers an opening into the circulatory system, or too vigorous brushing creates an opening and the deadly germs find their way into the system.

A Sterilized Tooth-Brush Never Infects

DENTO

is an air-tight aluminum box containing an absorbent pad, upon which 15 drops of the sterilizing solution is applied. The tooth-brush is kept in this air-tight box and the fumes of the solution act as a powerful disinfectant and germicide, keeping the brush antiseptically clean. A year's supply of the solution is furnished.

DENTO, perfected by a leading dentist after years of study and research work, is guaranteed to keep the tooth-brush sterilized, thus obviating the danger of infection from this source. Pyorrhea and other germ infections will yield more readily to your dentist's treatment by using a sterilized tooth-brush.

If you have not already received the little booklet, "Those Who Care," written by Dr. Roy F. Hurley, it will be sent to you on request, free of charge.

PROGRESSIVES SPLIT ON REVENUE BILL IN BOTH HOUSES

La Follette Against it, Lenroot for it in the Upper House

SIMILAR DIVISION IN THE HOUSE DELEGATION

Badgers Wonder Who Seated Lenroot and Bob Together

(By Betty Pruett Farrington)

WASHINGTON.—(Special to The Tribune and Leader Press.)—Senator Lenroot returned to the capitol in time to vote for the republican revenue revision bill. Senator La Follette, remaining here, voted against the bill with five other republicans. The bill was passed by a vote of 39 to 29.

The vote of the delegation in the house on the conference report on the revenue revision bill—the bill as it becomes a law—was of more than passing interest because of the division in the progressive group. On a motion of Representative Garner, of Texas, to recommit the report with instructions to retain the higher brackets on the inheritance tax proposed by the senate, the delegation voted as follows:

For the motion—Beck, Browne, Cooper, Frear, J. M. Nelson, A. P. Nelson, Lampert, Kleczka, Voigt.

Against the motion—Stafford.

Not voting—Classon.

That motion was lost and the vote on the adoption of the conference report was as follows:

For the report—Cooper, Frear, Kleczka, A. P. Nelson, Stafford.

Against the report—Beck, Browne, Lampert, J. M. Nelson, Voigt.

Not voting—Classon.

Frear Leader of Badgers

Following the fight for the higher surtaxes, supported by the Wisconsin delegation, Mr. Frear was the recipient of Governor Blaine's telegram congratulating the delegation on its part in retaining the 50 per cent maximum. He has become the outstanding member of the Wisconsin delegation in the house largely by reason of his fight against the dye embargo and against the sales tax, both of which met with great success.

But it will interest persons following political developments in Wisconsin that Mr. Frear voted for the bill as Senator La Follette voted against it.

Stafford Against Maternity

Representative Stafford, of Milwaukee, was one of only 39 members of the house who opposed the adoption of the Sheperd-Towner bill for public protection of infancy and maternity. The measure had received the endorsement of the administration and both parties, and was the first for which women made an organized fight since they received the vote. On the last day of congress, the bill was signed by the president and becomes a law.

John M. Nelson, of Madison, spoke in behalf of the Sheperd-Towner bill. The opposition to it was based upon grounds that it was "Socialistic" and would result in little benefit to mothers and infants. In an appeal of some length, Mr. Nelson pointed out what the government was doing for animals on the farm and showed the need for some efforts to keep down infant mortality.

* * * *

In a special message to congress, President Harding asked that the World's Dairy congress, authorized by resolution sponsored by Edward E. Browne, of Waupaca, be held in 1922 instead of 1922. The object of postponing the event, he said, was to permit proper preparations.

* * * *

Probably no incident within recent date has aroused comment among persons here acquainted with Wisconsin affairs equal to that attending the fact that Senators La Follette and Lenroot sat "cheek by bowl," as one person put it, at the last open session of the armaments conference. They were there together at the meeting and sitting in adjacent seats as Premier Briand delivered his peroration in behalf of France.

But no one concluded they were together by choice. Ordinarily they are not on particularly friendly terms. They did speak to one another.

Apparently the person distributing the tickets in the state department appreciated the situation and thought a practical joke was in order at a peace conference.

NINE LIVES LOST WHEN BOAT SINKS

OSWEGO, N. Y.—Nine persons lost their lives when the lake steamer City of New York sank in Lake Ontario off Stony Point in a storm late Saturday.

Five bodies—one woman and four men—were picked up by the steamer Isabella H., and brought here. The bodies were found in a yawl. Nearby another boat bearing the steamer's name was drifting but it was empty. This boat undoubtedly was the one in which Captain Harry Randall, master of the ill-fated steamer, his two boys and a member of the crew sought safety when the steamer went down. It is believed they were washed from the boat.

EMPKE DEFEATS STOKES

FARGO, N. D.—Billy Empke of St. Paul earned a shade over Leo Stokes of Fargo here Saturday night in a ten round go. Stokes led the first half of the fight and held his own until the seventh, but finished the fight with his left eye nearly closed and bleeding badly from the mouth. Empke was unhurt. The scheduled ten round go between Gunner Joe Quinn of St. Paul and Johnny Nichols of Minneapolis was stopped in the fourth round because of injury to Quinn's shoulder. Russie Levoy of Fargo easily outpointed Leo Schwabel of St. Paul in their scheduled eight round go.

ALLEN TRIPLETS YEAR OLD

La Crosse's triplets will be a year old today.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allen, Ninth and Green Bay streets, are the proud parents of the triplets, but a good many persons in La Crosse claim an interest in them, and it is doubtful if any babies in this city were ever fondled and loved by more persons than these youngsters.

This is not the last picture taken of the triplets, but they are every bit as healthful and handsome now as they appear in this photograph.

Incidentally Mr. and Mrs. Allen desire at this time to express their thanks and appreciation for kindness extended to them and the triplets during the past year, especially to churches and clubs.

nor convey to the communities in which those cities are held the great lessons that the cities teach. Did not the Modern Health Crusade, our lecturers, the Crusader, health games, songs, playlets, pamphlets, etc., make tuberculosis the most familiar and best understood of disease names, public support of sanatoria, public health nurses and so on would not, I am sure, be forthcoming so readily.

"The anti-tuberculosis movement has, in the Christmas seal, what is in many respects the most unique and most desirable medium of raising funds ever employed for similar purposes. The cost of collecting the hundreds of thousands of individual contributions in thousands of communities ranging in size from Milwaukee to the smallest school district would not be justifiable nor defensible were it not for one great and important truth, what more fundamental life saving knowledge has been spread to hundreds of thousands of widely distributed Wisconsin homes throughout the collection of pennies than would have been by the expenditure of the entire sum by a paternalistic benefactor."

FOCH IS GIVEN GREAT OVATION IN TWIN CITIES

Delivers Noteworthy Speeches in Great Meetings Arranged in His Honor

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch of France concluded a twenty four hour visit in the Twin cities Saturday night by receiving a thunderous ovation at a mass meeting in the St. Paul Auditorium.

Jammed to capacity, an admiring throng heard the allied commander utter a eulogy to the American soldier, and as he concluded the demonstration in honor of the distinguished visitor exceeded any accorded him here.

Saturday night he and his party departed for Bismarck, N. D., where several hours will be spent Sunday. The party is bound for the Pacific coast, and will make several stops in Montana.

On every hand, in his visits in various parts of both cities, the generalissimo was acclaimed by thousands. His appearances included a brief address at the state capitol, in which he voiced a hope for disarmament "on land and sea."

A large part of the day was spent in Minneapolis, where he was greeted by a crowd that extended along the entire route of his travel over Nicollet avenue to the parade grounds.

The field marshal visited two public health service hospitals—one in each city—and spoke a few words of praise for the world war heroes there.

In addition to his address at the St. Paul Auditorium, the marshal spoke at a mass meeting in the Minneapolis Auditorium Saturday afternoon, where where his reception was as wholehearted as in St. Paul.

Speaking at a banquet in St. Paul Saturday night, the marshal said that "unified determination of the nations can achieve peace throughout the world as surely as unity of command brought military victory to the allies."

And once the nations that survived the war as leading powers have put their houses in order, he added, they will be in a position to establish peace universally by assisting in the restoration of order in Russia and other places where anarchy exists.

In Minneapolis the field marshal was taken over victory memorial drive, a party driveway dedicated to the soldier dead of that city. The smile faded from his face as he was driven down through the row of trees, each bearing the name of a soldier.

come pertinent again. The Washington gathering could hardly fail to be a rival of the Geneva association. Competition between the two organizations might easily follow and it is not impossible that members of the older might expect inducements to persuade them to transfer their allegiance.

It is true that there remains a very great lack of clarity in the Washington mind as to exactly what the president himself was thinking of when he reverted to his familiar topic of an association of nations. The first impression was and still lingers that he had deliberately transformed the whole character of the present gathering. When M. Briand went home there was a general feeling that we were seeing the beginning of the end, that the first dinner guest was going and the end of the party in sight. The conference as outlined by Mr. Hughes in his opening speech was obviously reaching its term. Now Washington is again frankly at sea and is awaiting eagerly clarification and explanation.

EX-SERVICE MEN APPRECIATE THEIR HOLIDAY FEAST

The ex-service men at St. Francis hospital surely enjoyed their Thanksgiving feast. They say the did and that settles it.

One of the buddies, writing to the Tribune and Leader-Press, expressed the appreciation of the twenty men in the following words:

"Oh, boy! Can the world ever go wrong? Not so long as the Service Star Legion, the Elks, Mrs. Hackner, Mrs. MacWillie and Keyes and his friends are with us.

"Reveille sounded on Thanksgiving morning, and it was far sweeter to the ear than former 'ta, ta, ta, ta, ta,' as it was spoken by the nurses with their gentle voices. We didn't know what was going to happen to us when we were rushed into the elevator and lowered to the basement. But we soon discovered, for upon arriving in the dining room we found on the table a dinner fit for a king. Did we eat? I'll say we did. After we had finished that big turkey looked as if he had spent fifty years under a heavy attack of bayonets.

"We do not know how to thank Mother Richards and the sisters for making everything so lovely for us, so we are taking this indirect method of showing how we appreciate it all.

"And after dinner they kept on doing things for us, and how we did enjoy it. And just tell the folks that we want to get well so we can get out and help those good people aid those who are not yet well."

HIGH SCHOOL BOY SETS A PACE FOR SCOUT APPLICANTS

Gives Interesting and Thorough Answers in His Tenderfoot Examination

FINE POINTS OF ORGANIZATION ARE NOTED IN HIS HISTORY

Gives Meaning of Scout Badges in the Resume

Robert Barth, a member of the High School Radio troop, in answering the questions for his tenderfoot examination gave such thorough answers to the questions that they have been submitted as good reference for other boys who wish to become Scouts in the future. To become a Scout a boy must be 12 years of age; he must fill out an application blank on which he gives necessary data regarding his age, church affiliation and school record. A part of the application is used by the parents in certifying to the boy's age and that the parent has read the Scout oath and law and is willing and desirous that the boy become a member of the Boy Scouts of America, and that they will assist him in observing the requirements of the organization. After the signature of the parent or guardian is affixed, the application is submitted to the Scout master and troop and upon completion of the examination of the tenderfoot requirements, the boy takes the oath of a Scout. He repeats this obligation in the presence of any scout official and only then is he eligible to wear the tenderfoot pin and regulation scout uniform protected by special act of United States congress. The tenderfoot tests are here given for information of any one who is a prospective scout.

Upon completing this examination and repeating the obligation of a scout in the presence of a scout official, a candidate is eligible to wear the tenderfoot pin and the regulation scout uniform, protected by United States congress. p. 31.

Answers to Questions

The answers to the questions were as follows:

1. Chief Scout Executive, James E. West; National Scout Commissioner, Daniel Carter Beard; La Crosse Scout Executive, Albert B. Burgess.

2. (a) After five years service in the movement a first class scout may, upon application, become a life member of the Veteran Scout Association with the designation of Veteran Scout, provided he agrees to live up to the scout obligation, to keep local scout authorities in the community in which he lives informed as to his availability for service to the community in case of any emergency, and to take active part in the promotion of scouting, as the circumstances and conditions in his case permit. (b) An associate scout is a member of a troop of Boy Scouts, who cannot attend all meetings but is carried on the troop records as an associate scout, provided he will attend at least one meeting of the troop within a year and in all other respects be guided by the obligation of an active scout. (c) No troop can act as a Boy Scout troop unless they first receive a charter from the national council, which is renewed annually. A registration fee of $6.00 with an additional fee of fifty cents for members enrolled in excess of 12, either as active or associate scouts. The assistant scoutmaster, scoutmaster and troop committeemen, who give volunteer service for the promotion of the scout program, are not required to pay any fee. The scoutmaster must be an American citizen and at least 21 years of age. There are three troop committeemen, who are responsible to the community, church, or organization that a scoutmaster is enrolled for service with the boys.

Describes Badges

3. (a) The scout executive badge is a silver badge with a silver eagle, red background, and silver wreath. (b) Scoutmaster's pin is a silver badge with a green background. (c) Assistant scoutmaster's is a gold badge, gold eagle and green background. (d) The eagle scout badge is composed of an eagle with outspread wings across whose breast is written B. S. A. This eagle is attached to a second class patrol leader's pin by a red, white and blue ribbon in horizontal stripes, and is worn above the lapel of the left pocket. (e) A senior patrol leader's badge consists of a first class pin with a background of three green bars, the third bar one-half the length of the longer bars. This badge is worn on the hat only. (f) A patrol leader's badge consists of two green bars one and a half inches long, each bar three-eights of an inch wide and worn three inches below the shoulder seam of the left sleeve. In other respects it is a first class pin, gun metal in color. (g) A merit badge is a small emblem worn on the right sleeve only in rows of not more than three, parallel to the edge of the cuff and two inches above the service stripes, which are three inches above the edge of the cuff. They are awarded to all first class scouts who have qualified in one of the numerous subjects of merit badge work so that he may pass an examination before the "court of honor," made up scout officers and experts in the particular merit badge work. (h) The badge of the first class scout is a combination of the tenderfoot and the second class pin reproduced in gold and worn midway between the wrist and elbow or on the hat. (i) The badge for a second class scout is a scroll, upon which is written "Be Prepared," from which there hangs an overhand knot which reminds the scout of his "daily good turn." The badge is reproduced in gold and is worn midway between the wrist and elbow or on the hat.

Tenderfoot Badge

(j) The badge of a tenderfoot is a three pointed emblem, taken from a mariner's compass and used to designate tenderfoot, or in other words "Aim of Life." The pin is reproduced in gold and is worn on the left lapel of the shirt or on the scout hat.

4. In giving the meaning and history of the scout badge and design, I will take the first class pin in its two parts. The tenderfoot pin is a modified form of the sign of the north on the mariners compass. From north 15 other directions can be accurately found. The tenderfoot pin is the sign of "aim" in scouting. A tenderfoot aims to be trustworthy and if he is trustworthy he cannot help but be brave and if he is trustworthy he is reverent, reverent towards God who is put first in the scout oath and last in the scout law, the beginning and the end of scouting is God. The three points of the tenderfoot pin refer to the three points of the trefoil of the three points of the scout oath. The eagle with outspread wings is a beautiful reverence to the protection of our country and to our government, for scouts because of its great aim. The second class scout badge is a scroll. In historical days the scroll was used as our books are used today. Paper was not plentiful and the modern method of recording events was not known and all events were written on long pieces of paper and rolled in from both ends and securely tied. Nothing but facts could be written on these scrolls.

5. (a) Scout oath. On my honor I will do my best: 1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey the scout law. 2. To help other people at all times. 3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight.

(b) Scout law: A scout is trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent.

6. History fails to inform us who first suggested the idea for the composition of the national flag. Some writers claim that the design was suggested by George Washington's coat of arms while others say that the stripes were taken from the thirteen stripes in the banner of the Philadelphia Troop of Light Horse. The design was decided upon by a committee of the continental congress, consisting of Gen. George Washington, Robert Morris, and Col. George Ross. The design called for, originally, a six pointed star, but was later changed to one having five points.

The flag first became national on June 14, 1777, when the American congress adopted the following resolution proposed by John Adams of Massachusetts:

"Resolved: That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white on a blue field, representing a new constellation."

In addition to the above meagre description it is interesting to know that the sars on this flag were placed so as to form a circle and were of six points, the five-pointed star not being used until later. It remained thus until May 1st, 1795, when congress increased the number of stars and stripes to fifteen to provide for the admission of the states of Vermont (1791) and Kentucky (1792) into the union. Apparently the first engagement in which American troops carried a flag of stars and stripes design was the battle of Brandywine, in September, 1777. The first salute ever given "Old Glory" by a foreign power, was when the Ranger, commanded by Captain Paul Jones, entered the French harbor of Quiberon, February 14, 1778, and received a salute of nine guns from Commander La Motte Picquet.

It is interesting to note that it was this fifteen striped flag that flew over Fort McHenry in Baltimore harbor, on that memorable night of September 13, 1814, which was to give us the words of our national anthem. This continued to be the official flag until 1818 when it became apparent that a stripe added for every state would soon render the flag unwieldy and unsymmetrical. On April 4, 1818, a bill was signed by President James Monroe restoring the design of the flag to the original thirteen stripes. This act reads as follows:

Section 1. Be it enacted, etc., that from and after the fourth day of July, next, the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes, alternate red and white; that the union have twenty stars, white in a blue field.

Section 2. Be it further enacted, that on the admission of every new state into the union, one star be added to the union of the flag; and that such addition shall take effect on the fourth of July succeeding such admission.

The American flag of today is composed of thirteen alternate red and white stripes, arranged horizontally, with a blue field in the upper left hand corner, containing forty-eight five-pointed stars. It will be noted that these stars are arranged in six rows of eight each and are so placed that one of the points goes directly upward. Seven stripes are opposite this blue field, while the remaining six extend the full length of the flag.

Must Not Touch Ground

7. First of all, the flag must never be allowed to touch the ground. When used in unveiling ceremonies of monuments or busts it should always be raised, never allowed to fall to the ground. When a number of flags are displayed on poles, the American flag is hoisted in the most conspicuous position. It is raised first and taken down last. When displayed on a platform the flag is placed at the speaker's right hand side. When carried with a number of other flags as in a parade or pageant, the American flag should either be borne ahead of the others or in the center. If, however, there is only one other flag, the American flag has the place of honor on the right, having the flag of the other country, organization or state on its left. It should nor be hoisted before sunrise nor allowed to remain up after sunset. At Morning Colors, Evening Colors and during the playing of the Star Spangled Banner a scout in uniform stands at attention, hat on and executes the scout salute holding it until the last note has been played or in the case of colors until the flag has either been raised to position or folded up and passed from the immediate vicinity. A scout, not in uniform, but who is in the ranks of a uniformed troop acts the same as if he were in uniform. Scouts not in uniform and who are standing by themselves will remove their hats and stand at salute as used without the hat. The position of his body should be the same as if at attention. When the national colors are passing on parade or review, the spectators, if walking, halt, and if sitting rise and stand with their hats placed over their left breast, until the colors have passed. A scout in uniform keeps his hat on and salutes, commencing his salute a short period before the colors reach a point opposite him and holding it until they have passed. Flags used merely as decoration on a float are not saluted. When the flag is flown at half mast as a sign of mourning it should be hoisted to full staff at the conclusion of the funeral. To fly a flag at half mast, hoist it briskly to full mast and lower slowly to half mast. After the time for displaying it thus has passed, hoist it briskly to full mast and lower slowly and reverently to the ground. At all military funerals the flag is draped over the coffin. When the funeral passes along the street a scout should come to a halt, face outward to the street and commence his salute when the hearse is six paces from him and hold same until the hearse is six paces past. Every scout should caution his parent or friend that it is customary for men to remove their hats and hold same over their left breast while the American flag is passing, either carried in parade or draped over a coffin.

Allegiance to Flag

8. I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the nation for which it stands; one nation indivisible with liberty and justice for all.

9. "America:"

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died!
Land of the Pilgrim's pride!
From ev'ry mountainside,
Let freedom ring!

"Star Spangled Banner:"

O say! can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hailed at the twilight's last gleaming?
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched, were so gallantly streaming?
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof thro' the night that our flag was still there,
O say, does that Star Spangled Banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

10. The scout motto does not mean military preparedness, does not mean religious preparedness but means preparedness to help others at all times, enemies and friends, by helping all peoples, whoever they may be, to do their duty to their God and nation, others and themselves. It is a fact that any person helping other people are always helped by some invisible hand and power of promise. Many people fail to study the fundamentals of scouting and think that a scout is necessarily a soldier because he wears a uniform and salutes and is obedient. The scout wears a distinctive uniform to identify his class. He wears the uniform so that he may easily be picked out and readily called upon in emergencies and the better informed people investigate the motive and not the appearance for their criticism.

Calicut Under the Ban

Calicut, which figured in the news recently as the center of some riots, is the place from which calico gets its name. It was calico from Calicut that caused serious trouble in England two centuries ago, when the Spitalfields weavers went about assaulting anyone whom they saw wearing the Indian cotton goods, which they feared, not without reason, would injure their own trade. Consequently an act of Parliament was passed forbidding the use of calico under a penalty. Nowadays Calicut exports more teak and sandalwood than calico.

Gentle Hint to Bride

At one time women were considered the property of their father or nearest male relative and a Saxon husband hung a slipper, then a symbol of authority, in a prominent place in the bride's home.

The only arguments some people listen to are their own.

Paris Cannot Hear Her Clock Chimes

The correspondent of a London paper says that Parisians are complaining of the unusual noise of their city due largely to the general use of the automobile. The streets are filled with public and private automobiles and the din is constant and terrible. An organized movement is endeavoring to have some of the noises suppressed and the chief complaint is that Paris cannot hear her chime clocks, of which there are many in the city.

ILLINOIS MAIL ROBBER SUSPECTS HELD IN INDIANA

Five Men Given Hearing Today on Charge of Robbing Illinois Central Train

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.—Five men, two of them negroes, were given a hearing Saturday before U. S. Commissioner C. R. Randell, on a charge of being members of a gang of bandits who on November 7 held up and robbed an Illinois Central mail train at Paxton, Ill.

The men were lodged in jail here Friday night. They previously were arrested at Indianapolis November 11 in connection with the death of Steve Ferguson who was found dead near Rockville, Ind. Those under arrest are: James Hill, 25; Joseph Barnett, 20; Frank Wolfe, 19, all white; Vern Jones, 25; and Garret Osborn, 27, negroes.

Postoffice inspectors said today sufficient evidence had been obtained to send the prisoners to Illinois for trial.

The body of Ferguson was found in a ditch. Federal authorities believe Ferguson was a member of the bandit band and was fatally injured in the battle with passengers and the train crew, which resisted the hold-up for forty-five minutes.

Army Of Women Doctors Not Practitioners

A writer in an English medical paper says that 12,000 women have completed courses in medicine, but a great many of them do not practice. Some of them take positions in medical school offices, with medical publications and similar employment and then many of them get married and thus interfere with a professional career.

Still Living

"Do you remember the time when your father drove a donkey cart?"

The parliamentary candidate fixed his eyeglass and gazed thoughtfully at the interrupter. Then he replied: "As a matter of fact, I had quite forgotten the cart. But I am thankful to see the donkey is still alive."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

FAMOUS FAMILY OF PUPPET SHOWMEN HERE AT MAJESTIC

Marlette's Marionettes Have Been Hereditary Since 18th Century

A feature of the big Majestic bill for Sunday is the appearance of Marlette's Marionettes.

For nearly two hundred years the name of Marlette has been identified with "Marionette" acts. In the eighteenth century the English forebears of the present family were the reigning exhibitors of this delightfully entertaining form of amusement and following the prescribed English law of heredity one of the family has followed the footsteps of the founder each generation to the present day, a record unrivalled in the world of amusements.

The Marlettes, who present this "Marionette" act, are three in number. They manipulate approximately three hundred strings attached to the puppets, no small job when one understands that if the wrong string was pulled the result would be obvious. The present offering is a veritable production embracing all branches of dancing, acrobatics, pantomime, comedy and novelty.

The Espinosas—Senor Arturo-Y-Senora Elvira Espinosa, offer an artistic and colorful dance diversion in which they introduce a series of terpsichorean originalities. The sartorial display is noteworthy, adding beauty and interest.

Other acts on the big bill include Cook and Catin, two girls with a piano; Carlisle and La Mal in "At Training Quarters;" Lea and Fay Durbyelle, shadowgraphers and magicians, and Brawley and Louise in "It's All a Fake."

Madame Kaji Yayima, 90-year-old Japanese woman leader, photographed with a petition which she presented to President Harding. The petition written on Japanese rice paper 100 yards long, is a demand for the abolition of war, and bears the signatures of 10,000 Japanese women.

BOLIVIAN PLEA FOR SEAPORT PROTESTED BY PRESS OF CHILE

Has no Right to Ask for Territory Rightfully Chile's is Claim

SANTIAGO, Chile.—Bolivia's request that the assembly of the League of Nations at its recent session revise the treaty celebrated with Chile in 1904, in order that Bolivia should obtain an outlet to the sea, has provoked sharp criticism in the Chilean press and has been widely commented upon in official circles here.

Barros Jarpa, Minister for Foreign Affairs, in a statement published in the newspaper La Nacion declared that "Bolivia's action before organisms foreign to our sovereignty, directed to obtain territories that are ours, will be considered in the future as an explicit manifestation of Bolivia's desire to interrupt the cordiality of relations between the two countries.

"Bolivia believes it has a right in the Pacific; we believe that she aspires to a port, but not the right. If at any time Bolivia had rights after the war of 1879, those were expressly renounced in the treaty of 1904, that country receiving in exchange benefits that totaled more than $25,000,000. Bolivia should expect nothing from Chile unless it is asked by the friendly road."

By the treaty of 1904, Bolivia ceded the province of Antofagasta in which is now located one of the most important ports in northern Chile.

Bolivia's original claim was presented at the second assembly of the league, but was withdrawn and again brought before the recent meeting at Geneva. The Bolivian delegates, according to information received here charged, among other things, that the "treaty, imposed by force, deprived Bolivia of its only access to the sea and that the actual state of things constituted a continual menace of war."

A commission of jurists was appointed at the request of the assembly to consider Bolivia's demand with regard to the scope of article 19 of the pact. The jurists reported that Bolivia's demand in the form in which it was presented was inadmissible; that the treaties is exclusively the affair of the contracting parties.

La Nacion commenting on the findings of the jurists says Chile has gained a moral victory, but is "now our duty to obtain a clear statement regarding the intentions of the Bolivian government in the second phase of the question; whether or not its pretentions have ceased with the retirement of the affair from the assembly."

We wonder how many of those men who refuse to work more than eight hours a day have wives at home who are also struggling for shorter hours?—Pennsylvania Farmer.

Death Suspected

SEZ MISS PUMPS AN' MISS GOLOSHES:

MISS PUMPS

Two pairs of limbs met at the corner of Fourth and Main. One pair stood forth out of a pair of neat but soaked satin pumps. The other was hidden within a pair of flappy goloshes.

Rain had followed a snow storm and great puddles of slush surrounded them.

The pumps and the goloshes eyed one another and—

SEZ MISS PUMPS

This is NOT my season. True, they call me pumps—but why, oh, why should I constantly be filled with water? They never prime me! Dampness? My worst enemy! I gush with unhappiness whene'er I encounter slush. At each step of my wearer I ooze tears of unhappiness. My only revenge is to chill the feet that wear me. I am a watersoaked wretch!

SEZ MISS GOLOSHES

This is my season. Bring on your rain and your snow and your sloppy weather. Hold back the sunshine ere I be laid away in a dark closet. I am so built that I delight to delve in dampness. And at each delve I flap with happiness. At each step of my wearer I wrinkle into smiles. True, I hide the silken hose that rest in me, but hence the world does not look down upon me.

The Walrus

Joseph L. Hofweber, La Crosse distributor of Wills Sainte Claire, Maxwell and Chalmers cars, is credited with being the inventor of the first automobile starter, according to the Motor West, a trade journal, published in Los Angeles. It was back in 1911 when Joe got the hunch to simplify the business of starting a flivver in cold weather. He conceived and made an attachment which shot a perfect solution of "gas" into the engine and enabled the driver, on the coldest day, to start his car with one turn of the crank. "It was the nearest thing to a self starter known in those days," said Mr. Hofweber, when asked about his invention. "I tried it out in its first real test on a morning when the thermometer on the wagon bridge registered 44 below zero, and my engine started on the first turn. Mr. Melby, the Whitehall banker, was the first man to buy one of the starters for his Ford and later a number of local people equipped their machines." Mr. Hofweber has invented a number of automobile accessories and also has built cars, but the little oil starter device was one of his greatest achievements, for it paved the way for real starters with which all cars are now equipped.

The street-car is emulating the automobile. Now comes the La Crosse street-cars all dolled up with wind shield wipers. Every automobile driver knows the value of a windshield wiper in rainy or snowy weather. It keeps the glass in front of him clear and saves him from a collision and perhaps fatality in inclement weather. It is just as important for the street-car motorman to be able to see what is on the track ahead of him or approaching the right of way at street intersections. And I have heard a good many patrons of the Wisconsin Railway Light & Power company commend the utility during the past few days, since the cars were equipped with those new-fangled wipers, calculated to give the motorman a clear view of the track in any kind of weather.

A friend from Pennsylvania walked up and down Main street the other day, gazed into our busy shops, took a little saunter along "Wall street," where the jobbing houses are located, and finally dropping into the Elks' Club late in the afternoon, said: "Say, you folks here in La Crosse don't know what hard times are. You may have a few people out of work, but I didn't see them on the streets. A good many of your factories are operating; the retailers and jobbers are doing a good business, and all in all, you seem to be sitting pretty. I am making comparisons, for in a city the same size in Pennsylvania which I just left, there are hundreds of idle men walking the streets and you can't go a block without being intercepted by a lean looking chap, who says: 'Say, Buddy, can't you let me have two bits; I can't find a job and I'm hungry.' There are hundreds of cities worse off than La Crosse in this dull period and I know of no city that is in better shape."

Speaking of business conditions reminds me that Glenn White dropped in from the west a few days ago with word that Montana is getting back on its feet after the last wallop it got due to poor crops. In some sections of Montana, he said, business is almost normal and farmers are preparing for the next season's tilling in optimistic and encouraging style. But in the Dakotas, Glenn said, it's different.

What are our shade trees worth? If from the point of view of the cord wood dealer the average shade tree of our city contains say one-half cord of wood, the value—considering the fact that Elm, Soft Maple, Hackberry and Basswood are rated as a low grade quality of fuel—would pay perhaps $2.50 or $3.00 per tree, less cost of cutting, transporting and disposing of the waste, etc. If taken from a sentimental angle as a part of our home and family life the potential value is apt to grow to a degree that can not be expressed in dollars and cents. Just south of the old Moulton house on Sixth and Cass streets where the captain lived with his family since 1863 until the time of his death some years ago, there stands a beautiful hackberry tree—over six feet in circumference and more than two and a half feet in diameter, breast high and perhaps 45 or 50 feet tall—one of the finest and largest in the city. This was already a tree of some size when the captain took possession of the place 56 years ago. He was a lover of nature and in the later years of his life, after he had retired from business, this fine, stately old gentleman could regularly be seen admiring his trees and shrubs, watering and caring for them as their needs required and developing an affection for them as one might for a faithful domestic animal or even a friend, realizing full well that a shade tree of size is one of the few things that money cannot buy. If a woodsman had come to him and said "this tree will make 1200 feet of box boards; I will pay you at the rate of $10 per thousand for the tree on the stump," would Captain Moulton have been interested in his offer? If a committee of tussock moth caterpillars had waited on him, stating that they were about to devour all the leaves on the tree, thereby causing it to die, but would pay the proper damages—what price would the captain have set on it? This is the viewpoint we should take as to the value of our shade trees when considering the trouble and expense of the fight on the tussock moths which are now threatening the very existence of our trees.

Charley Bonneville, secretary of the La Crosse Drug company, claims the endurance contest record for remaining longest at a summer camp this year, Mr. Bonneville found so much to occupy his spare time tinkering around camp and so much enjoyment in the fine outdoor life that he did not finally leave the cottage at Riverside camp until last Saturday. He might easily have remained through the holidays had it not been for the difficulty encountered in starting his car on cold mornings when the thermometer was registering down toward the zero mark. And I wouldn't be a bit surprised, if we have a spell of mild weather, to see the smoke again curling out of certain chimneys over on the Minnesota shore, a short distance below the railroad bridge.

M. H. Shafer, conductor on the La Crosse division of the Milwaukee road, writes reminiscently in the Milwaukee Railway Employes' Magazine as follows: "Two miles east of West Salem we ascend McKinley Hill, another heavy grade, and named after J. McKinley, owner of a large farm through which the road passes. It is said of McKinley, that when the road was being built through his farm, he stood guard with an old flintlock weapon and threatened to shoot the first man who dared cut a tree on his premises. After standing vigil for two days and nights he fell asleep. His rifle was taken away and he had to submit, but when the big oaks began to fall, under the construction men's axes, he cried like a child."

John Costley, registrar in probate, is fond of telling stories. It doesn't make much difference whether they are on himself or his friends or his relatives; he tells 'em, nevertheless. Last week his five-year-old granddaughter, Betty Nelson, was visiting him. He had been reading "funny pictures" to the little miss when he said:

"Betty, do you think you amount to much?"

"I sure do," responded Betty.

"Do you know what that means? asked Mr. Costley.

"It means 'some pumpkins,'" was Betty's snappy answer.

And here's another one:

Nearly all of Mr. Costley's relatives were at his home. They were telling riddles and conundrums. The grown-ups were getting a lot of fun out of it. Then someone read this from a book of jokes, riddles and brain-agitators:

"A man was born in Italy; educated in France, entered business in England and died in Canada. What would he be?"

Everyone in the family circle hazarded a guess and missed by a mile. Then Betty got into the game.

"Why, grandaddy, he would be a dead man," piped Betty.

And, strange as it may seem, the five-year-old gave the correct answer.

LA CROSSE MAN EIGHTY-ONE YEARS OLD RETURNS FROM HUNT WITH A DEER

J. L. Pettingill celebrated his eighty-first birthday by making his fiftieth annual deer hunting trip to Iron River Bayfield county.

Mr. Pettingill not only went hunting but he also returned with a deer, felled with a bullet from his rifle on the last day of the outing only a mile from camp.

The La Crosse octogenarian is believed to be the oldest deer hunter in Wisconsin. Still enjoying vigorous health and capable of walking long distances without showing signs of fatigue, Mr. Pettingill enjoys his annual outing in the north woods more than any event of the year. Will F. McEldowney, of West Salem, has made the trip to Iron River, with Mr. Pettingill each year for over 20 years. Each of the hunters shot a fine big buck this year, although Mr. McEldowney's was the larger.

"I began to hunt when a boy, in 1854, in the upper peninsula of Michigan," said Mr. Pettingill, "and have always enjoyed the healthful outdoor life of the north woods.

"Hunting at Iron River is not as good as it was thirty years ago. The lumbermen have cut away the dense woods south of our camp, where the deer used to be found in numbers, and we have to cover a large territory of cut over pine lands to find our quarry now.

"I spotted my deer on the last day of the hunt, skirting the edge of a thicket and shot him in the side. I tracked him by the blood spots on the snow for a short distance and then realizing that he could not go far returned to camp. We went back an hour later and found the deer dead only a short distance from the spot where I gave up the pursuit. A wounded deer will walk a long way if pursued, but if the chase is abandoned will lie down in a short distance."

HOW THE SEA BECAME SALTY

Whatever story one believes about beginning of earth, it is undoubtedly a fact that at some time the earth was a red-hot mass. Later it began to cool, and during this cooling process parts of it contracted, thus producing the mountain valleys and depths of today.

This process of cooling caused a crust to be formed over the earth's surface and in between this crust and the earth a considerable quantity of gas was imprisoned. This formed the water, which eventually burst through the crust and filled all the holes and depressions in the earth. This water was fresh.

The surface of the earth was still very hot, however, and lots of this water was boiled and given off in steam. When the steam reached certain heights it cooled and became dense and the water fell on the heights of the earth. According to the nature of things, this water immediately began to flow down towards the valleys.

On its way it collected from the rocks that it ran over little quantities of potassium, magnesium, sodium, and so on, and all these minerals were eventually carried to the rivers and the seas. Thus salty matters were borne to our present seas and caused them to become salt. It must not be thought that they became salty at once; this carrying of salt by the rivers to the seas covered ages.

SICK SOLDIERS AT ST. FRANCIS HOSPITAL LEARN REED WEAVING

Three Service Men Already Have Turned Out Number of Lamps, Baskets, Trays

BILL CICHOWSKI, BLIND AFTER AN OPERATION, IS TEACHER

Service Star Legion Endeavors to Make Life Pleasant by Visits

THREE former service men, under the direction of another former service man, all of them patients at St. Francis hospital, are learning reed weaving and are planning to sell their handiwork in the city. It is their intention to make reed weaving their avocation until they regain their health and are able to return to their former calling.

William Cichowski, everybody calls him "Bill," formerly employed at the Wisconsin Pearl Button company's works, is the instructor of the class. Bill belonged to Company B, 27th Machine Gun Battalion, Ninth division, and was stationed at Camp Sheridan as a gas and machine gun instructor. Some time after he was discharged from service he became ill from ulcers of the stomach, which he believes he contracted while in the service. He was operated on and lost his sight. He has been the sole support of his aged father and mother, who live at 720 Oakland street. After Bill was stricken blind he went to the school for the blind at Janesville and among other things, learned reed weaving, making lamps, trays and so on. Now he is teaching his companions in St. Francis hospital the handicraft.

Those in the Class

So far there are only three in the class, although there are ten former service men receiving treatment at the hospital. Most of them are unable to work at even reed weaving. Those in the class are Donald Blackburn of Sparta, who was in the infantry in the 13th Division and was stationed at Camp Lewis. He was a railroad brakeman before entering the service; George Dohlby of North La Crosse, cook in the 164th Field Hospital unit, and George Hanson of La Crosse.

Both Hanson and Dohlby have lost their voices, through bronchial trouble. Hanson has been making small baskets, while Dohlby, who is Bill Cichowski's most adept pupil, has been making reed lamps. Blackburn has been working on sewing baskets. Dohlby has been in the army and was 18 months overseas. Hanson was a machine gunner in the 48th Division and saw two months of overseas service.

Workshop in Basement

Bill's workshop consists of two rooms in the basement of the St. Francis hospital. They are light and airy. Piles of reeds lie in the corners and coils of it are submerged in tubs to soften it and make it pliable. On racks on the window sills and tables are many finished baskets. Some have been given one coat of shellac, while others have been finished and are drying. In another part of the room are large baskets that are being painted.

The men work mornings in the weaving rooms. The afternoons are usually taken up with visits to doctor's offices.

Ed Rohde, of Galesville, who was in Company B, 121 Machine Gun Battalion, 32nd Division, has been at St. Francis hospital a week. He also probably will join the weaving class soon. Arnold Christianson of Waupaca, member of the 121st Field Artillery, 32nd Division, who was operated on in his throat, is slowly recovering. He is unable to do weaving, but is knitting a scarf. He is using bright blue yarn and has the scarf nearly half done.

Has Foot Amputated

Another soldier, named Larson, who was brought to the hospital a short time ago, had his right foot and right lower leg amputated several inches below the knee. He has not been able to do any kind of work as yet.

Probably the one bright spot in their lives as St. Francis hospital patients is the Service Star Legion and the county nurse. Elsie Burkhardt. Miss Burkhardt makes frequent visits to the hospital each week, talking and cheering the boys. Two members of the Service Star Legion, Mrs. Barbara J. Foster and her daughter, Kuni, have not let a single Sunday pass in more than a year without paying a visit to the soldiers at the hospital. They bring fruits, flowers, tobacco, candies and pastry to the boys. Other members of the Service Star Legion have visited the hospitals, of course. Mrs. R. W. Keyes and Mrs. A. V. Ingham, both active in the Service Star Legion work, have paid many visits to the sick soldiers and have turned their automobiles over to the use of the boys.

K. C. To Help

The Knights of Columbus also have become interested in these sick and suffering soldiers, and with assistance from Miss Burkhardt, arrangements have been made to place the handiwork of the soldiers on sale at Doerflinger's store. William Doerflinger expressed himself as being particularly well-pleased over the opportunity to be of service to the soldiers and eagerly informed Miss Burkhardt and the Knights of Columbus that a counter in a prominent part of the store would be placed at the disposal of the soldiers where they might sell their reed ware.

COMPLETE AUTOMOBILE HOME USED BY LA CROSSE DEER HUNTERS IN A TRIP INTO THE COLD NORTH WOODS

NIFTY RESIDENCE ON WHEELS PLACE FOR REAL COMFORT

Three Warm Rooms Formed Out of Outfit on Chassis When Time Comes to Camp

An auto de luxe is the nifty vehicle in which four local hunters, George Philips, Nic Elsen and John Ledegar of La Crosse and Louis Merle of Bangor, traveled to the north woods, lived in during a week's pursuit of the swift footed denizen of the forest and returned home in below zero weather, this month.

Combining practically all the comforts of a home, packed into four walls mounted on a Studebaker chassis when traveling, but extended out to form three rooms when encamped for the night, the auto residence is pronounced by local tourists the niftiest and most complete outfit of its kind ever seen here.

The complete home is largely the result of the inventive genius of George Philips and represents nearly a year of planning and work. It is an all-season traveling home, adapted to the balmy breezes of Palm Beach or the chill winds and extreme cold of the great north woods in winter. The test which was given it during the recent deer hunting outing satisfied the four local hunters that they could live comfortably in the auto home in any kind of weather one might experience in this climate.

When folded up and ready for traveling the auto home is about the size of an ordinary mercantile truck, with space inside for four or six persons seated comfortably and room for all the luggage, food and equipment they might need for any kind of outing. Through a register at the front the heat from the engine circulates through the closed-in cabin and makes traveling very comfortable in cold weather.

Set Up Home Quickly

The local hunters on the recent trip journeyed to a point near Winter, 209 miles north of La Crosse. Arriving at their destination just before dark the quartet got busy and in a few minutes had the car converted into a home containing three rooms. The sides drop down, and at the same time beds which have stood on edge inside the cab fall flat into place. Canvas forms the roof for the bed-rooms.

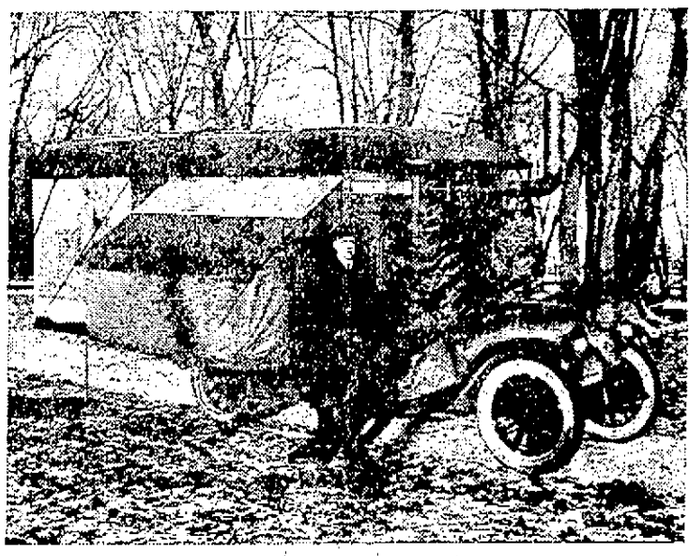

The telescope top of the auto is shoved on a track five feet toward the rear, the back wall is dropped down and presto, a dining room six by seven feet in size is created in the rear. The kitchen immediately adjoins this room toward the front. In this little kitchenette is an ice box, gasoline stove, all sorts of cooking utensils, dishes and everything that may be needed in the culinary department. Cupboards and drawers which surround the cook on every hand contain the things he wants to prepare a meal. Electric lights are suspended from the ceiling and by means of long cords can be moved from place to place.

For Women Too

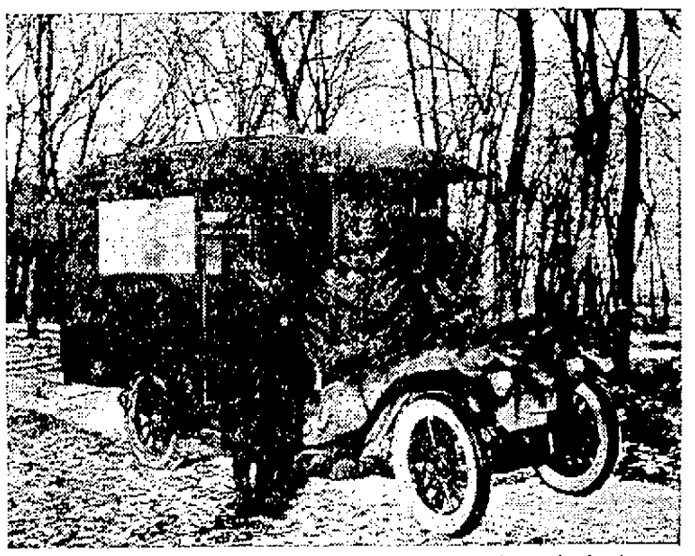

Just forward of the kitchen is a dressing table and mirror for the accommodation of women, when outers travel with their wives. There are two clothes closets and a medicine chest.

For winter travel, a sheet iron stove is used for the night's camp. Set up near the front of the car, the stove pipe extends through a round hole above the windshield, which is closed over with shutters when the car is moving. This stove heats the two bed-rooms and dining room in the car.

"We were as snug as a bug in a rug during the week we spent in the woods," said Mr. Philips. "It was fourteen below zero when we left Winter on the return trip at 10 o'clock last Sunday morning. We made the 209 miles home in just twelve hours, reaching here at 10 at night, and the first sixty miles we traveled through a blinding snow storm."

Auto home set up for night.

Auto home ready for traveling (with deer on front fenders).

Deer Ride on Fenders

As a result of their prowess on the trail, the local hunters brought home two fine bucks. The deer, lashed to the front fenders of the car and lying with their horns projecting over the front, with tiny Christmas trees standing between the two animals, added a festal and picturesque effect to the home on wheels. The outfit aroused great interest along the route and was admired by thousands in front of the Elsen & Philips garage, where it stood for two days after the return trip.

SPARTA, Wis.—(Special)—The social event, of interest to many, during this holiday season, will be the dinner and dance which will be given by the men of the Country Club on Thursday evening, December 1, at the Jefferson warehouse. The dinner will be from 5:30 until all are served and the dancing will begin at eight o'clock and continue until one. The entire dinner will be prepared by the men, with Mr. Harley Jefferson as head chef. Committees are already busy and no effort will be spared on the part of the men to put the affair over in great style.

The Frisco Five will furnish music for the dance. Invitations will be out in the near future.

Friday, a pleasant event will take place, when the members of the Queen Esther circle will entertain their mothers at a five thirty o'clock supper.

The third number of the Sparta lyceum course will be presented Monday evening in the Congregational church, when the Warwick Male Quartette will appear and give the evening's entertainment. It has a lively program, made up of saxophone, cornet, violin, cello and piano solos, duets, trios and ensemble work, as well as plenty of vocal work. The last entertainment given was the lecture by Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of Hon. William Jennings Bryan. Her talk was on the Modern Arabian Night, and described the taking of Jerusalem by the English army from the Turks. Her husband was an officer in the English army, and to be near him, she went as a nurse. Her descriptions of places she visited and experiences she had were wonderfully vivid and her audience was well entertained from first to last. The Lyceum course has been very successful and has been well received this year.

The C and B club met this week with Mrs. Foote.

The Guild of St. John's Episcopal church met Friday with Mrs. S. N. Dickinson.

The Sparta Literary Club will meet next Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. Will R. Crosby.

Mrs. Hal J. Davis entertained the Odds and Ends club Monday afternoon.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M. E. church will hold the regular monthly meeting on November 29. The business meeting will be at three o'clock and the supper will begin at five thirty and continue until all are served.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Govier entertained at a Thanksgiving dinner, Miss Lorraine Jones and her mother, Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Herth and daughter, Miss Eernice.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harris were among those who entertained at a family dinner party on Thursday.

Mrs. Jake Paul will entertain the Ladies' Aid society of the Evangelical church at the home of Mrs. John T. Hutson on Thursday, December 1, at 2:30 o'clock. Supper will be served from five until seven.

Friday night was the weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts. Nearly forty boys were present. Four new members were taken into the society: Darrol Graves, Lamont Gamerdinger, Ellis Fulton and Gilbert Alexander. Two new applications were handed in for membership: Seeley Gray and Ward Slayton. Assistant Scoutmaster Kent Dickinson gave the boys a talk on law and order. The balance of the evening was spent in playing games.

MISSING PASSPORTS OF SOLDIERS' WIVES FOUND AT COBLENZ

COBLENZ.—The missing suit case containing passports of the wives of eighty-two American soldiers who left here for Antwerp Friday on their way home, was found by the military police. Discovery that the satchel was missing was made just before the train pulled out.

The military police who found the documents expressed belief that the satchel had been taken from the train by a jealous woman. The passports are being rushed to Antwerp and arrangements have been made to delay the sailing of the transport Cantigny until the documents arrive.

MILWAUKEE SALOON MAN APPEALS CASE TO SUPREME COURT

High Tribunal to Pass on Constitutionality of Severson Act Provisions

MADISON.—The licensing and bar regulation provisions of the Severson prohibition enforcement act will be considered by the state supreme court to determine their constitutionality in an appeal taken Saturday by Hugo Alby, Milwaukee saloonkeeper.

A bill of exceptions was filed to the findings of Judge E. Ray Stevens when the case was before him for determination. He upheld the new law in every respect, deciding that the drastic licensing was constitutional, and that bars must either be removed or placed in conformity with the regulations set down in the law.

The appeal of Alby will bring the first test of the new state law by the supreme court, and if the findings of Judge Stevens are upheld, will definitely determine the constitutionality of the statute.

The December calendar of the court has already been made up, so that argument cannot be opened before the January session at the earliest.

SOLVE RAIL PROBLEM TO CUT LIVING COST SAYS CHICAGO MAYOR

CHICAGO, Ill.—The ability of the laborer to live cheaply lies largely in the solving of the railroad problem, Mayor William Hale Thompson said, in a letter to Secretary Hoover, made public Saturday. The letter was in answer to an invitation for suggestions from Mayor Thompson.

"It is my opinion that the solving of the railroad problem is of the utmost importance to the prosperity and happiness so long as commerce between the farmer who raises the wheat and workmen who make the plows is halted or prevented by a toll levied upon each by the stockholders of railroads which are over capitalized and operated for profit instead of for the benefit of the shipper and consumer."

"THE SHEIK" EXOTIC MOVIE OF ARAB LOVE WITH EXCELLENT CAST

"The Sheik" is the big colmes at the Rivoli this week. It is an exotic sort of picture, the locale being in the desert near Biskra, Algeria, and most of the hundreds of people in it being Arabs. The hero, played by Rudolph Valentino, is a most refined and polished Arab chieftain with a university education, and the heroine, Agnes Ayres, is an English girl "of family" who believes in adventure.

Ahmed (Valentino) kidnaps Diana (Miss Ayres), after she horns in on a party for Arabs only disguised as a dancing girl, and being discovered makes a big hit with the sheik. He fakes her to his desert tent, and there eaches her to like being bossed. So, when a bandit, named Omair, becomes enamored of her beauty, and also does a kidnapping stunt, Diana fights like a wild cat, licking four slave girls and Omair himself in the free-for-all.

They say the picture was taken in California, but if they had said it was taken on the Sahara itself no one would have raised an objection. Scenery, costumes, etc., seem absolutely perfect and most elaborate. The beauty of Miss Ayres affords ample reason for the trouble she causes by her recklessness in taking a lonely journey into the desert and getting herself kidnapped and Valentino makes a very likeable figure of romance.

There are thrills—battles, sieges, Oriental dances, and all the sort of thing that one imagines make life interesting for the wild sons of the desert and his family. Altogether, it's the sort of movie entertainment that can be guaranteed to take one away from his daily cares and worries for two hours of real amusement and excitement.

Many spectacular night scenes, embodying wierdly beautiful lighting effects as out of the ordinary as the plot of the story itself, are included in "The Bronze Bell," which will follow the Sheik at the Rivoli. A number of the startling episodes of the story were photographed between dusk and dawn, resulting in bizarre atmosphere and background which are in perfect accord with the action and characters.

The most impressive of the scenes of the picture are those within the great Hindu "Temple of the Bronze Bell," a massive stone monument, wherein, amid sharply contrasting lights and shadows, fanatic natives are routed by British soldiery and a revolutionary plot against the government crushed.

Doris May, a dainty Paramount favorite, and Courtenay Foote, a well known British stage star, assume the leading roles of Sophia Farrell, the daughter of a British Indian army colonel and David Amber, an adventurous young American, around whom the plot revolves.

NORMA TALMADGE, BILL RUSSELL AND JUSTINE JOHNSTONE AT MAJESTIC

Norma Talmadge will be seen on the screen of the Majestic theatre Sunday only in her feature photo-drama, "Poppy." This is adapted from Cyathia Stockley's novel. The story is intensely dramatic throughout, dealing with the life of a young girl who graduates from drudgery to refinement.

Miss Talmadge plays the part of Poppy Destin, whose life is moulded by three men, Luce Abinger the unscrupulous, Dr. Bratalian the generous, and Evelyn Carson the lover. These persons have become known as "the three worst men in South Africa" on account of their adventures with women, but two of them prove that they are entitled to less sinister description. Through them the unique situation arises of a young woman, married to a man without knowing it, while the man she loves and who loves her believes his one meeting with her was only a dream. The unraveling of this original plot is one of the most fascinating of the screen stories of the year.

JUSTINE JOHNSTONE MONDAY

Although she gained her first fame as one of the gorgeous Follies girls, and is noted for her ability to wear smart clothes smartly, Justine Johnstone sticks to her role of a newly arisiocrat in "A Heart to Let," and does not wear a single gorgeous costume, as she has done in all her previous pictures. The appealing story of the young heiress, who owns a run-down mansion and a profitless plantation, a marvelous family tree, but an empty pocketbook, is said to offer her one of her best acting opportunities. "A Heart to Let" comes to the Majestic Theatre here Monday.

BILL RUSSELL NEXT

William Russell's latest picture is "Singing River." He will appear in it next Thursday at the Majestic. "Singing River" is a lively tale of the old days in the west when crooks played havoc with those men who were trying to make good honestly. It required brave men to clean up this gang, though it took a long time. Russell meets a gang of these land and cattle crooks, and he erases a large blot from the landscape—and wins the girl who is the heroine of the story.

JIMMY AUBREY COMEDY AT THE COOPER THEATRES

There is a barrel full of fun, literally as well as figuratively, in "The Back Yard," a Jimmy Aubrey comedy which will be shown at the Cooper Theaters this week. Indeed, there are two barrels of fun. One, for a moment, is also full of children, black and tan and white, and in another instant it is a barrel no longer. Barrels, in their time, have held strong stuff, but that was not strong enough to hold so many strong kids. Jimmy Aubrey himself occupied the other barrel for quite a while in spite of the efforts of two husky cops to remove him, through opposite ends. The extreme flexibility of Jimmy was demonstrated as the pair stretched him out long and then let him snap back into normal shape again.

LOUISE GLAUM—CASINO

Louise Glaum's directorial mentor in "Love," her J. Parker Read, Jr., Associated Producers attraction at the Casino today was Wesley Ruggles, brother of Charles Ruggles, the comedy favorite, and himself an erstwhile legitimate matinee idol. "Love" is Mr. Ruggles' second production made for Associated Producers under J. Parker Read, Jr.'s personal supervision.

JACK PICKFORD—STRAND

Clean, fast humor—jollity—that describes "Just Out of College," a Goldwyn Picture, with Jack Pickford at the Strand today. There's not a shade of vulgarity in it, though it is punctuated with screamingly funny situations. A very definite plot, carefully constructed forms the framework for situations that would make the glummest pessimist come out of his shell. Pickford has splendid support, among the actors figuring in the picture being the famous "Lefty Flynn," the Yale athletic star of not so long ago.

HAZEL DAWN AT COOPER THEATERS IN FILM, "DEVOTION"

Motion picture enthusiasts who admired the Prince of Wales during his stay in this country will be afforded an opportunity to witness His Highness' charming personality in "Devotion," starring Hazel Dawn, which will be shown at the Riviera on Wednesday and Thursday and Strand on Friday and Saturday.

Lionized by society's four hundred and feted and dined until the very last moment of his departure, the Prince is seen surrounded by a group of notable American captains of industry witnessing the Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, New York City. This scene, which was filmed exclusively at great expense, is part and parcel of the photodrama telling the story of the ardent love of a young woman for her husband.

A number of picturesque scenes showing for the first time in motion pictures the wonderful swimming pool of the Pennsylvania Hotel, New York City, where for two days the prominent members of the cast enjoyed its privileges while filming scenes for "Devotion." Another magnificent set reveals a society function in which over 2,500 people were used as "extras." Prominent members of the cast supporting Miss Dawn include E. K. Lincoln, the well known character actor, Violet Palmer, Benita Randolph, Bradley Barker, Henry G. Sell and Wedgewood Nowell.

Punch and Judy in Tuberculosis Campaign

The Rockefeller Foundation is responsible for a very active anti-tuberculosis campaign, which is being waged in France. There are four units of four persons each, traveling in automobiles and visiting communities where there is any interest expressed in the work. These units are equipped to give popular information on the subject, making use of moving pictures and other attractive features including Punch and Judy shows. At these gatherings a great deal of printed matter is distributed to those attending; and the results are very gratifying.

In order to prevent mine disasters by reason of the explosions of dust, the Bureau of Mines is encouraging the mine owners to make use of barriers of certain rock dusts which are not explosive and the explosion's force has the effect of scattering this dust and preventing the spread of the explosion.

"CAMILLE" STARRING TWO FAMOUS STARS AT RIVIERA TODAY

Photoplay Adapted from Celebrated Dumas Play; Directed by Producer of Big Picture

"Camille," the Nazimova production which opens a 3-day run at the Riviera today has been modernized for the screen in an adaptation by June Mathis, who wrote the continuity for the Rex Ingram productions for Metro of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "The Conquering Power." In playing the Dumas heroine, Nazimova follows the tradition that has led nearly all of the great actresses to give it a place in their repertoire; the tradition of Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Clara Morris, Rejane, Modjeska, Laura KoKene, Olga Nethersole and Ethel Barrymore.

In Rudolph Valentino, the dashing young actor who plays the role of Armand Duval, Nazimova has a leading man of brilliant gifts who has won much praise for his remarkable performances in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," as Julio Desnoyers, and in "The Conquering Power," as Charles Grandet.

The story is about a young Parisian law student, Armand Duval, who loves Marguerite Gautier, known as Camille, a notorious, beautiful woman who abandons her Parisian haunts and decides to live simply and unobtrusively with him. Armand's father, anxious for the family honor, prevails on her to leave his son. Camille consents, returns to her cabaret night life, but is deserted by her friends when illness attacks her. Slowly she sinks to poverty and neglect and at last dies, happy in the thought that she prevented Armand from ruining his chances of a career. Before she dies, Armand has learned of the sacrifice she made for him.

In addition to Rudolph Valentino, Nazimova's supporting cast includes Edward Connelly, Rex Cherryman, Arthur Hoyt, Zeffie Tilbury, Ruth Miller, Consuelo Flowerton, Mrs. Oliver and William Orlamond.

Ray C. Smallwood, associated with Nazimova in all her recent Metro productions, directed "Camille." Rudolph J. Bergquist photographed it and Natacha Rambova had charge of the art direction.

A feature of "Camille" is the manner in which the stage settings have been designed: they follow the modern school in evoking the atmosphere and moods of the plot.

MISTAKEN IDENTITY LEADS TO SHOOTING OF TWO DETECTIVES

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Mistaking each other for thieves, two railroad detectives shot each other on a Milwaukee railroad train six miles from Brookfield Junction Friday night, it became known Saturday.

Elmer Kleck, Milwaukee, is suffering from a severe bullet wound in his arm. He will probably recover.

AGNES AYRES HAS REAL BATTLE WITH FOUR GIRLS IN "THE SHEIK" AT RIVOLI

When screen stars are required in the performance of their roles to battle for the preservation of their lives, honor or personal rights, it is often done listlessly, but not so in "The Sheik." There are several scraps in this picture and each one is a real battle and no make-shift affair.

Thus it happened that when Agnes Ayres, Paramount star and featured player with Rudolph Valentino in George Melford's magnificent production of "The Sheik" which will be the feature at the Rivoli Theater this week was directed to fight four Arabian slave girls "for all she was worth" she obeyed orders literally, the result being a scene of intense realism seldom seen in any motion picture.

"It was lots of sport," said Miss Ayres the next morning. "But, oh, today! I feel as if I'd been through a cyclone. Those girls were all stockily built and all four clung to me at once and I had to throw them off. I assure you I haven't any idea just what I did—I was told to fight and that's all there was to it."

This is only one of many realistic scenes in this superb production. There are many thrilling moments in the action, a desert sandstorm, battling Bedouins and magnificent Saharan scenes. The picture is based on E. M. Hull's novel of the same name which created a literary sensation both in this country and in England.

MOST RECENT MAGIC ILLUSION FEATURES "PACEMAKERS" SHOW

The most talked-of illusion to appear on the stage in the last year will be presented at the La Crosse theatre next Saturday as a feature of "The Pacemaker" burlesque company's offering. It is presented by Horace Siereak. Briefly, the illusion is that of a young woman being sawn in two, and is said to be startling realistic and absolutely baffling. The young woman, tied by volunteers in the audience, is placed in a narrow box in which there is no room to turn or bend, and the box is then sawed through—at least anybody is welcome to do the sawing, with his own saw. Then a bit of hocus-pocus, and the young lady emerges all in one piece, smiling sweetly. The act has created considerable excitement wherever shown, shown.

The biggest vaudeville show to be seen here for months will be that offered at the Majestic Sunday, when eight big acts of classy Junior Orpheum variety will be shown.

In addition to the extra-large bill of vaudeville, there will be a picture featuring Norma Talmadge in "Poppy," and a special opening overture "Morning, Noon and Night," played by the Beyerstedt orchestra.

VERSATILITY OF PAUL BARTLETT

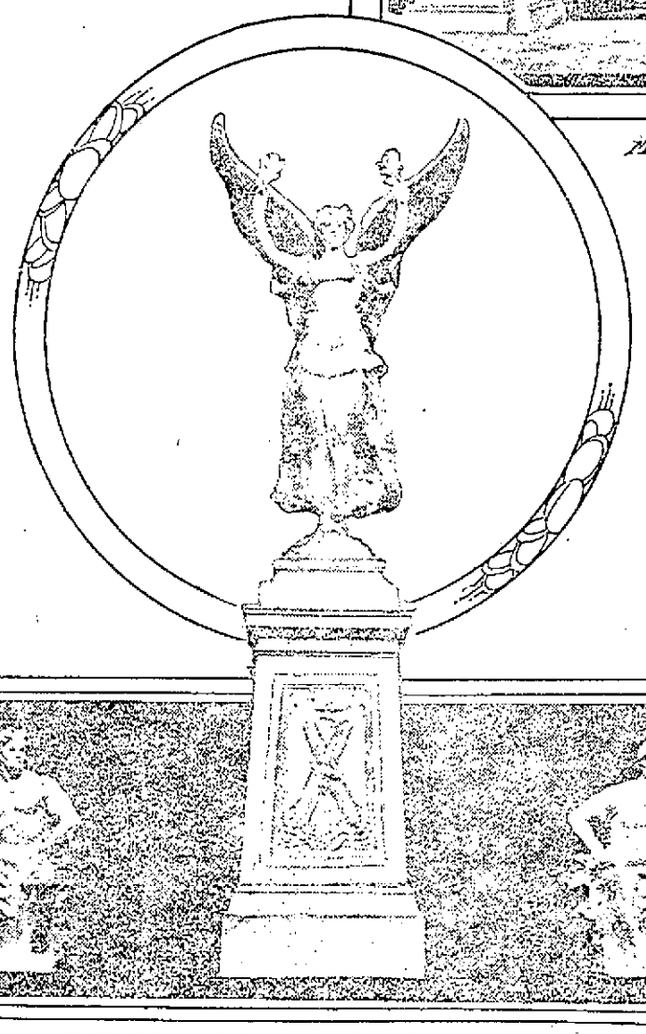

As Shown in the New Oklahoma Commemorative Arch and Other Works

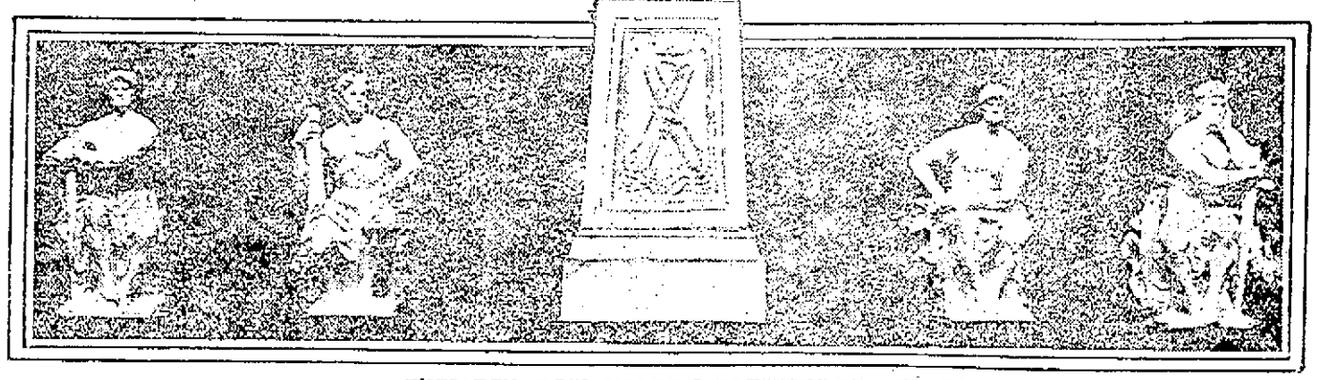

ALEXANDER AGASSIZ IN BRONZE, NATIONAL MUSEUM, WASHINGTON, D.C.

MODEL ILLUSTRATING THE OKLAHOMA MEMORIAL ARCH

FIGURES, OKLAHOMA MEMORIAL ARCH

ONE of the finest monuments to our fallen soldiers will be the Oklahoma soldiers' state memorial, to be placed on Lincoln boulevard about one-half mile south of the capitol building in Oklahoma City.

It will be of Oklahoma granite, 150 feet wide, about 91 feet high and about 35 feet deep, with triple arch approaches to the capitol; the right-hand arch to span the driveway to the capitol; the left, the return driveday, and the center, giving a view directly toward the main entrance portico, contains a statue of Victory; the arches are 30 feet in width and 55 feet high.

At the base of the two central piers marble statues of Four Guards to Victory, symbolizing the characteristics of the Oklahoma soldier: Patriotism, courage, thought and power.

The two outer piers will carry at their bases four group statues in marble, representing the ideals for which they gave their lives: Liberty, justice, truth and peace. The frieze, about 370 feet around the arch, will picture in relief the story of the achievements of the soldiers from Oklahoma in the war: The departure from home, embarkation camp, crossing the Atlantic, debarkation, march to the front, battles, victory, armistice, march back to the port with wounded, crossing the Atlantic back and welcome home. The names of the six principal battles in which the Oklahoma soldier was engaged will be carved on the east and the west sides of the arch.

In the upper part of the arch, reached by elevators, will be Necrology Hall, about 100 feet long and 30 feet wide, containing in the center an altar of Liberty surrounded by a statue of Memory. On the walls will be chiseled on marble panes for perpetual record the names, date of birth and date of death of nearly 1,000 men who made the great sacrifice.

In this Necrology Hall will be carried the coats of arms and battle flags of all nations who formed the Allies in the world war.

Suitable inscriptions in the English language will be chiseled on the four sides of the arch above the frieze.

In order to carry out the allied international character of the world war there will be erected on the small courts on each end of the arch four groups of statuary, represnting the French "Poilus," the English "Tommies," the Italian "Bersaglieri" and the Belgian "Flemish Soldiers."

The work of the Soldiers' Memorial Commission has been dominated by a desire to plan something that would be a dignified, beautiful, permanent and worthy tribute to the state's immortal dead heroes—something that would impress on coming generations in all the civilized world the high reverence, respect and obligation the living friends of our dead soldiers feel for them.

The details in architecture and sculpture have been developed by the co-ordinated work of the Soldiers' Memorial Commission: Layton, Smith & Forsyth, architects, and Paul W. Bartlett, the sculptor, of New York, who has supervised, harmonized and provided the sculptural work connected with the arch.

The Soldiers' Memorial Commission is composed of J. B. A. Robertson, Governor and ex-officio chairman, Mrs. Thomas H. Owen, treasurer, Oklahoma City; General Roy Hoffman, Oklahoma City; Dr. Charles Evans, Oklahoma City, and George F. Southard, Enid, Okla.

The model which now stands in the capitol in Oklahoma City is nine feet by six and shows the beauty of the design and its sculptures in a very satisfactory way. In the illustrations is also shown the bronze statue of Alexander Agassiz by Mr. Bartlett, which is in the National Museum in Washington.

A newly devised instantaneous dressing for burns consists of three rolls of gauze immersed in a solution of bicarbonate of soda and mineral, put up in a container with an instantly removable lid.

Turning Fighting Devices to Service in Peace Time

SOME of the most important inventions born during the emergencies of the war are now being converted to the uses of peace with promises of decided benefit.

The camouflage department of the navy, which designed and painted more than 1,200 vessels to deceive the enemy as to the course they were following at sea, has been for some time turning its energy and talent to the application of paint in such manner as to make clearer the ship's true course and increase its visibility in order to minimize the danger of collision at sea.

The Bureau of Mines, which assisted in the war work of perfecting the microphone and the geophone to ascertain the exact location of enemy guns, is now using these delicate instruments to locate entombed miners when necessary.

Microphone for Mines.

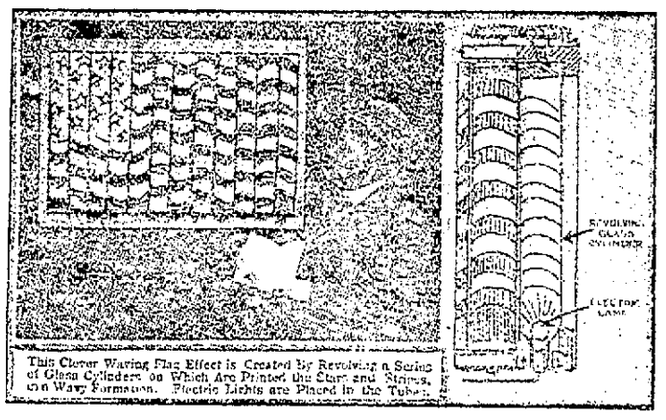

The principle of the microphone was applied in ascertaining in a general way the location of a ship at sea. Toward the end of the war this device had been so perfected that it was possible for the microphone listening station to calculate the exact position of enemy guns after hearing the shots. The speed with which sounds traveled was of course known, and served as a basis of calculations at different stations. With these listening stations electrically connected, it was possible to record the exact time at which the sound reached them and then, by a series of rather intricate calculations based upon triangulation, the locating of the object producing the sound could be ascertained.

In the experiments conducted by the Bureau of Mines, at the request of the French government, the microphone developed undreamed-of possibilities. Instruments of great sensitiveness to sound were prefected and reports from men engaged in this work stated that the dropping of a pin on the floor of a room sounded like "the roar of Niagara" to men with the listening device. The geophone, based upon the same principle, except that sound waves were recorded from the earth instead of from the air, has likewise been developed here and abroad.

Like a Seismograph.

While these experiments for war purpose were being conducted, experts of the Bureau of Mines conceived the idea of applying the instruments to locate entombed miners. Interesting experiments along this line have been carried out with marked success. Men with the geophone establish themselves at the headquarters of the so-called rescue station, while the theoretically entombed miner, located at a considerable distance, strike the earth with his drill. By means of the instrument he is located at once.

The geophone is really a small seismograph, since it works on the same principle as the huge apparatus with which earthquake tremors are recorded. It consists of an iron ring about three and a half inches in diameter, within the center of which is suspended a lead disc, which is fastened by a single bolt through two mica discs, one of which covers the top and the other the bottom of the ring. There are two brass cap-pieces, the top one having an opening in its center, to which is fastened a rubber tube, leading to a stethoscopic ear-piece. These cap-pieces are fastened with bolts to the iron ring and serve also to hold the mica discs in place.

This Clever Waving Flag Effect is Created By Revolving a Series of Glass Cylinders on Which Are Painted the Stars and Stripes, in a Wavy Formation. Electric Lights are Placed in the Tubes.

—From Science and Invention.

MAKING THE FLAG WAVE

As Explained in the Inset Text, it is Done by Revolving Cylinders Lit by Electricity. It is Used for Illumination at Night.

Thus in effect we have merely a lead weight suspended between two mica discs cutting across a small air-tight box. If the instrument is placed on the ground and some one is pounding or digging in the vicinity, energy is transmitted as wave motion to the earth and the earthwaves shake the geophone case. The lead weight, on account of its mass and because it is suspended between the mica, remains comparatively motionless. There then is produced a relative motion between the instrument case and the lead weight. The result is that a compression and rarification of the air in the instrument take place. Since the rubber tube leading to the stethoscopic ear-piece is connected with this space in the geophone, the rarification and compression are carried to the eardrum. Usually two instruments are used, one for each ear.

When the two instruments are used, it has been found that the sound is apparently louder from the instrument nearer the source of the sound. It is then evident that by moving the instruments properly a point can be found when the sound will be of the same apparent intensity in both ears. The direction of the sound is then on a perpendicular to the line connecting the centers of the two instruments either in front of or behind the observer. Further observations will show which side.

Uses for Gas Mask.

Upwards of 2,000,000 American soldiers were trained in the use of gas masks during the war and shown that they were completely protected by the masks from all the poisonous gases used in warfare. It is hardly remarkable, therefore, that to the majority of these boys the gas mask seemed a wonderful invention. Most of the soldiers have now resumed their civilian occupations. Having become familiar with the life-saving qualities of the gas mask, they are now demanding protection in industrial life against suffocating gases, similar to those they were obliged to contend with during their period of service at the front. In other words, they want their gas masks back.

Since the close of the war the chemical warfare service of the army has received many inquiries regarding the use of army gas masks for all sorts of purposes, varying from protecting workmen charging mercury retorts to alleviating the lachrymatory difficulties encountered in peeling onions.

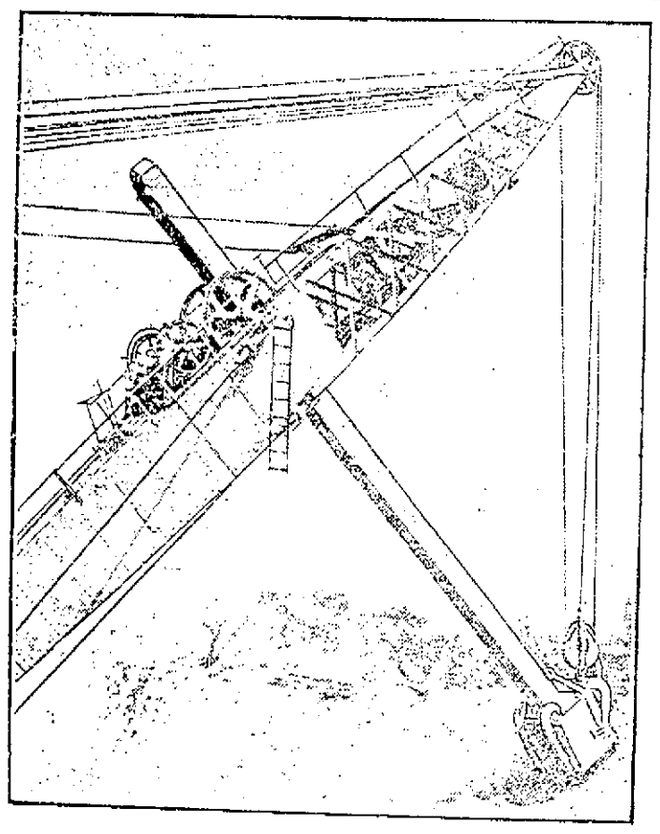

To meet this demand Uncle Sam has established a gas mask department at one of the experiment stations of the Bureau of Mines. Experiments thus far made in the industries by experts connected with the station have most conclusively shown that the requests of the ex-soldiers are sensible. The army gas mask, it has been proved, really has a very wide application in protecting workmen from the noxious gases and fumes that are given off during many dangerous chemical operations, and more especially in cleaning out and repairing towers, tanks and chambers, in which sediments emitting irritating and toxic fumes have accumulated. Masks also give good protection to workmen against the oxides of nitrogen and sulphur dioxide, and they have proved very useful in pyrite smelting and roasting operations.

A large demand for army gas masks has come from industries using chlorine and chloride of lime, as, for example, factories using bleaching material, pulp and paper mills, chlorination operations and water purifications.

There have also been numerous inquiries from workmen and employers alike regarding the use of army gas masks for protection against various organic vapors. The mask has proved to be useful where the liquid does not have excessively high vapor pressures. Successful tests were made by workmen at a by-product coke plant when they entered a large benzol washer immediately after it had been emptied. Workers in rubber factories have used the mask successfully around volatile solvents such as carbon disulphide, carbon tetrachloride and sulphur chloride. Many uses of this nature could be cited.

But the largest demand so far for gas masks has come from city fire departments. The need of a simple smoke filter has been a long-felt want in fighting fires. Many experiments have been made to show that the gas mask is an efficient smoke protector. Unfortunately, it does not protect from carbon monoxide met with in some fires.

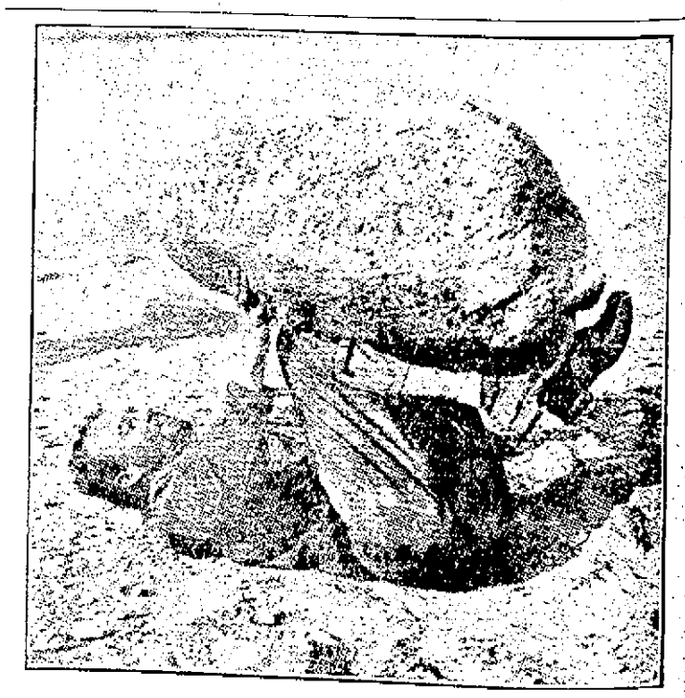

On the whole, the army gas mask now that its use in warfare is done, is rapidly finding its place in the industries. It has not yet met all the requirements, especially in cases where the workmen must wear it for long periods, as experience has shown that they simply will not keep any kind of a mask on continuously if they can possibly get along without it, but for short periods, and in emergencies, it has proved to be very useful.

MRS. GEORGE REAY AT HOME SATURDAY TO LARGE COMPANY

MRS. GEORGE R. REAY was a charming hostess at her home, 1301 State street, Saturday, at a pretty afternoon reception, the receiving hours being from three to six. The rooms were very prettily dressed, a color scheme of yellow and white being carried out. Chrysanthemums were freely used in all the rooms. The serving table in the dining room was laid with a handsome Madeira cloth with a centering of a large crystal basket filled with Ophelia roses combined with baby's breath. Surrounding this were miniature baskets containing the same flowers, the baskets being linked by festoons of trailing smilax. The table was otherwise trimmed with the smilax as well as all the rooms, where it was carried out with dainty effect.

In general charge of the rooms was Mrs. J. R. Murrel, who directed the guests. Mrs. Edward Evans and Miss Katherine Gallagher alternated at the coffee urn and Mrs. A. W. Schalt and Mrs. Edward Vpigt in pouring the tea. Mrs. A. A. Bentley and Miss Marie Phillips were in charge of this room. Alternating in serving the ice cream were Mrs. H. W. Livingston and Miss Josephine Semsch. A bevy of young ladies assisting included the Misses Grace Cameron, Mary Ann Phillips, Florence Eddy and Gertrude Sisson. Little Dorothy Johnson attended the door. Two hundred guests called during the receiving hours.

ON SATURDAY afternoon Mrs. R. M. I. Kinnear entertained at a delightful informal afternoon "at home" at her residence, 224 South Tenth street. It was given in compliment to her daughter, Mrs. H. R. Andrews of Daggett, Mich., a bride of a few weeks. The receiving hours were from three to six, about seventy-five guests leaving cards during that time.

THE LA CROSSE Woman's club met November 22 at the home of Mrs. F. A. Morley, 1437 Charles street. Mrs. A. A. Bentley as leader of the day, introduced the following participants on the program: Mrs. Frank Allen, who gave a biographical sketch of Professor James Francis Pyre of Wisconsin university; Mayor Bentley, who discussed the policy and system of city taxation, and Mrs. Earl Mell who read "Wisconsin Evermore," the new state song adopted by the State Teachers' association this fall.

The copy from which this new song was read is believed to be the first printed copy to arrive in the city, and was secured by a member of the club through the kindness of the author, Miss Elizabeth Mott of Neenah, Wis. Miss Mott in an accompanying letter throws some interesting light on her poem: "I have been unusually blessed in opportunities of enjoying Wisconsin scenery. . . . The thought of the poem came like a flash with the will to write. It was to sketch the distinctive scenic features of Wisconsin landscape. It must tell the loveliness of field and wood, lake and river, and the enchantment of summer nights on the waters, all was to be unified by the expression of that universal attachment to native surroundings most poignantly exemplified in the homing instincts of birds."

One of the largest and most unique affairs of the season was the costume and masque party given by the employes of the Marinello company in the Marinello club house Wednesday evening.

The rooms were artistically decorated with quantities of autumn leaves in most gorgeous colors and this together with the red, white and blue electric lights, made a very pretty setting for the guests who arrived in costumes representing the colonial and historical periods, nursery rhymes, impersonations of well known people, etc. In one corner of the dance hall in the midst of foliage was a gypsy tent which seemed all the more realistic as it appeared to be on the edge of a wood. The tent was occupied by a young gypsy girl who had interesting fortunes for all. In the opposite corner was an electrically lighted moon, which shone through the branches of these improvised trees, making the scene all the more idealistic.

The evening was spent in dancing, music being furnished by a three-piece orchestra. During the intermission various stunts were staged by different employes, among them being songs and dances by the Wailuhi girls, a club composed of ukelele players; clog dances and songs and music by the hand organ grinder and his performing monkey.

During the dances the different colored lights were turned on the dancers, making a beautiful sight and there were waltzes in the moonlight.

Handsome prizes were awarded the following characters: southern darkey, hand organ grinder, Napoleon Bonaparte, Spanish senorita, Dutch girl, Dutchman and Swede, Indian maid, the Israelite, Spanish dancer, Sis Hopkins, Marinello girl, pirate, Mr. and Mrs. Marinello and the Wailuhi club.

At a late hour refreshments were served.

The strains of Home Sweet Home were played all too soon as each and every one seemed reluctant to depart from this place of great mirth and merriment.

ONE OF THE MOST delightful Thanksgiving dinners in La Crosse last Thursday was the festal event arranged for the disabled ex-servicemen at St. Francis hospital. Twenty ex-soldiers enjoyed the feed. The Service Star legion furnished two turkeys, flowers and fruit, "Ted" Burns a box of grapes, Henry Schnaubelt the ice cream, and various individuals and firms raised a $10 fund which purchased cigarets and cigars, mixed nuts and raisins. The sisters in the hospital cooked an elaborate dinner, which was served to twelve of the men in the doctors' dining room. Eight of the boys who were unable to move were served in their rooms. The ex-service men were not slow in expressing their appreciation for the blessings of the day and it was truly a delightful time for them.

NAVY BATTLESHIPS BATTER ARMY DEFENSE AT POLO GROUNDS

CAPTURE ANNUAL SERVICE FOOTBALL CLASSIC, 7 TO 0

Army is Out-rushed and Out-played; French Displays Brilliant Work

BARCHET FEATURES IN LINE PLUNGES FOR NAVY ELEVEN

Navy Takes Lead in Series of Games Since 1890

NEW YORK.—The battleships of the Navy eleven ploughed through the heavy seas of the Polo grounds Saturday, battered the Army's fortifications in the rain, captured the annual service football classic, 7 to 0, and took the lead in the series. Since 1890 the Navy has won twelve times and the Army eleven.

The Navy scrapped its airplanes upon discovering early in the game that dreadnaughts were more effective for making progress against the enemy. It made an attack with line plunges and end runs that resulted in an advance of 55 yards to a touchdown early in the second period.

Barchet Features

Barchet was the stellar battle cruiser in this progress toward the white line and indeed throughout the game. From his own 44-yard line he circled end on a kick formation twenty yards. Conroy and Barchet then alternated in carrying the ball off tackle from a tandem formation until the former smashed through for a touchdown, followed by King's goal. The progress to the goal comprised thirteen plays during which the Navy earned first down four times.

Out-rushed and out-played in the line, the Army threatened to tie up the game late in the last quarter as the result of the brilliant playing of French. Receiving a punt at his own forty yard line he ran it back ten yards and followed this up with a twenty-eight yard run around his right end with interference provided by a double shift of the backs to the right before the ball was passed. In two more plays he had put the ball ten yards away from the Navy's goal line, but was thrown for a five yard loss in attempting to repeat.

Intercepts Pass

Here Hamilton, a substitute back, intercepted a forward pass, one of the five which the Army tried in vain during the game, and the threat of a tie score was averted.

HOLY CROSS EXACTS 6 TOUCHDOWNS FROM BOSTON COLLEGE

CALIFORNIA TEAM DEFEATS OREGON AGRIC COLLEGE

PASADENA, Cal.—The University of Southern California football team defeated Oregon Agricultural college here Saturday, 7 to 0. The only score was made in the third period when the Southern California team smashed their way over, Green carrying the ball on a double pass. Evans kicked goal.

Three Wisconsin Players Picked By Billy Evans For All-Western Big 10 Eleven

ALL CONFERENCE ELEVEN

FIRST TEAM.	POSITION.	SECOND TEAM.
Belding, Iowa	End	Tebell, Wisconsin
McGuire, Chicago	Tackle	Brader, Wisconsin
Pixley, Ohio	Guard	Birk, Purdue
Bunge, Wisconsin	Center	Vick, Michigan
Trott, Ohio	Guard	Redmon, Chicago
Slater, Iowa	Tackle	Huffman, Ohio
Crisler, Chicago	End	Goebel, Wisconsin
A. Devine, Iowa	Quarterback	Workman, Ohio
Elliott, Wisconsin	Halfback	Gould, Wisconsin
Williams, Wisconsin	Halfback	Stuart, Ohio
Locke, Iowa	Fullback	Sundt, Wisconsin

BY BILLY EVANS

Western football has proved its class in 1921.

No longer is the east supreme. Western football now means something to the sporting world.

Pixley

This fact was proved conclusively at the game between Ohio State and Illinois, on the outcome of which hinged the western championship. Princeton sent two of its football coaches to view the contest, feeling some worth-while knowledge could be secured. A rather telling admission on the part of the east.

The All-Western Conference team I have selected is a mighty strong aggregation. It is an eleven that would make anything from the east go the limit. It is a team that contains a number of brilliant individual stars, yet would not be lacking in any of the essentials that make up a great team, because of the presence of these stars. My conference team would be strong in all departments of the game.

In making these selections I have counseled with E. C. Patterson, who for many years has made a close personal study of western eleveens. It has been the ambition of all western players for seventeen years to land on Patterson's All-Western team. Mr. Patterson has seen every conference team play at least once and some of them three times. He has covered the western field thoroughly.

Trott

In presenting my All-Conference eleven, I desire to first introduce Aubrey Devine of Iowa as quarterback and captain. Devine is unquestionably one of the greatest football players the west has ever produced. He is without an equal at forward passing. He is a fine drop kicker, an equally good punter and a great open-field runner. He is All-American calibre, a player the west can point to with great pride.

Devine

The three best ends in the conference are Belding of Iowa, Crisler of Chicago and Goebel of Michigan. Belding's great work has been one of the bright features of Iowa's play throughout the season. He contributed a prominent part in bringing the western championship to Iowa. Belding draws one of the ends.

Belding

For the other end it was a rather hard matter to choose between Crisler of Chicago and Goebel of Michigan. Both have played fine football all season. Crisler's great game against Wisconsin came as a climax to a big year, and was the deciding factor in placing him on the first eleven and relegating Goebel to the second. His work against Wisconsin was by far the best exhibition of end play of the western season.

Crisler

Tebell of Wisconsin ranks well as an end. Martineau of Minnesota is also a working good end. He is the only Minnesota player who has performed consistently throughout the season. Were he on a winning team he would probably be strongly considered. Myers of Ohio State was eliminated as a possibility when he was badly outplayed in the Illinois game.

Slater

Slater of Iowa is the one best bet at tackle. He is a wonder on the offensive and a first-class man on the defense. McGuire of Chicago is the other tackle selection, with Huffman of Ohio State as a strong contender. It is really a toss up between the two.

Pixley and Trott of Ohio State are the guards. The fine work of these two players on the line, offensively and defensively, had much to do with Ohio State's great showing.

McGuire

Bunge of Wisconsin gets the center position. His real rival is Vick of Michigan, it was a great battle between the two when they met, with honors about even.

The selection of Williams and Elliott of Wisconsin as my halfbacks is certain to start many an argument. Perhaps one or two other backs have shown more on the offensive than either of the two backs selected, but in picking my backfield I have given consideration to both the offense and defense. Williams and Elliott have been brilliant defensive players all season.

Williams

Coach Richards of Wisconsin considers Gould the equal of any back in the conference. Stuart of Ohio and Kipke of Michigan are two excellent backs.

Elliott

Locke of Iowa gets the fullback position without any hesitation. Locke is a wonder on the offensive. His great work was one of the big factors in Iowa's defeat of Notre Dame. Slater and Devine being the other contributing factors.

Defensively Sundt of Wisconsin had a shade on Locke. Sundt's punting this season has been unparalleled by any kicker in the conference. I regard Sundt as the best defensive back in the west.

Locke

Thomas of Chicago is a very good man. He might be placed at one of the halfback positions without weakening the team. The fact that Thomas has not played a full conference game this year really disqualifies him. Thomas has been Chicago's "pinch hitter," or perhaps "pinch bucker" would be better. Stagg has used him in every game only for a limited time. He has always performed big things in that given time.

BILLY EVANS IS AN AUTHORITY

Billy Evans today picks youthful all-Western Conference eleven. Evans has picked this team of stars only after seeing many teams in action and consulting with players, coaches and experts --notably E. C. Patterson, of Chicago, whose all-Western selections for 17 years have been eagerly awaited by college football enthusiasts. Evans himself for years has refereed big football contests in the middle west, and is recognized as a real football authority. --NEA Service.

WISCONSIN FOOTBALL IS GREAT PRODUCER OF FINE COACHES

John R. Richards, Mentor of Badgers, Stands Out Among Conference Teachers of the Game--Strong Believer in Fundamentals

(By Walter Trumbull, Football Expert of the New York Herald)

WISCONSIN certainly deserves to be called the cradle of football coaches. Almost everywhere you turn in the west you find some Wisconsin graduate teaching the game.

Zuppke of Illinois, was a Wisconsin man. So was Steitum of Indiana; Wilce of Ohio State; Barry of Knox; McChesney of Lawrence; Keeler of La Crosse Normal; Downer of Milwaukee Normal; Olsen of Ripon; Van Gent of Stanford and, last but far from least, Richards of Wisconsin. The only Wisconsin coach of whom we know in the east is Brooks of the Camden High school, but there probably are more. They are scattered like the leaves in autumn.

John R. Richards not only knows football he loves football. One of the few graduate coaches of the West, he has everything which a coach requires to handle a squad of football youngsters. Every man on his eleven firmly believes that Richards invented football.

In the first place he was a famous Wisconsin fullback and traditions die hard, and when the new stands are built 15,000 spectators can be accommodated at a gridiron battle. The present wooden bleachers probably will seat about 27,000. There is to be a wall around the field, but the only part of that now completed is the gate, an imposing concrete arch, which stands as solitary as a lighthouse. Meantime you enter the field through what appears to be a vacant lot.

Wisconsin really should have a large stadium of some sort, because the university practically always has a good team and a good schedule, and is so well located for gathering a crowd. Madison is itself a city of 30,000, and Milwaukee is only two and Chicago a little over three hours distant by good train service.

Richards and his men had high hopes of the conference championship this season and for a time it looked as if they would be realized. Only ten points were scored against them by their conference rivals, but these ten points represented a 7 to 7 tie with Michigan and a 3 to 0 defeat by Chicago. All the same, that represents a pretty sturdy defense.

In scoring points against opponents the Wisconsin team was second only to Iowa. Richards certainly gave them scoring weapons. Rarely has a team looked better than that Wisconsin team did in practice for its big games.

One thing which seriously hampered the Badger eleven was its ineligible list. There is an eleven there which plays against the varsity and which is mainly composed of ineligibles. It has several W men on it. One of the players was gained to this team because he had flunked in Spanish. Can you imagine any one hard hearted enough to keep a boy on the side lines when his university is playing because he has flunked in Spanish?

There are some great football players among them. Elliott long has been recognized as a great back. He is as fast as a streak, and heavy enough to hit a line. Sundt, captain and fullback, is a good line plunger and a great defensive back. Williams played quarter this season, but he is a natural halfback, and one of the best in the game. Let him get started and he is as hard to stop as was Eddie Casey of Harvard in a broken field. There is no better running back in the west than this same Williams.

Bunge Great Center

Brader, at tackle, is second only to Slater of Iowa, and Tebell is a corking good end. Bunge is certainly one of the three leading centers of the west and he and Vick of Michigan are the two best in the conference.

There are thirty-seven men on the varsity squad at Wisconsin and eighty freshmen out for football. There are two second teams, and the university makes a great deal of class and school teams. For instance, there is bitter rivalry between the law school and the engineers.

Wisconsin plays are run both from regular and shift formations. The defence shifts to position by a signal given by the center. The ends play rather close to the line. The Badgers are one team which worked out a defence for the Minnesota shift, and they always have been able to meet it.

Richards gives his men blackboard talks all during the season. The scouting system at the Madison institution is fully the equal of any in the east. After studying the system and material at Wisconsin it is easy to see why the eleven representing that university always commands the profound respect of its rivals.

Membership Campeign And Tag Day Event On Saturday Nets Sports Association Over $500

The membership drive and Tag Day campaign of the La Crosse Outdoor Sports association staged on Saturday was a success—thanks to those who gave and those who worked in the campaign.

The receipts of the day checked up at 6 o'clock showed a total of approximately $500 and with several "precincts" remaining to be heard from later in the evening it was estimated that this figure would be brought to over $600. The total amount includes the receipts from tags and from the membership campaign.

While there is considerable territory throughout the business district remaining to be covered Monday, canvassers on Saturday did remarkably well considering that a majority of them were able to work but a few hours. The campaign will be continued on Monday and until the entire territory has been canvassed.

Unlimited credit is due members of the Tag Day and canvassing force who aided the association in the drive Saturday. Among the Tag Day workers were normal school and high school girls, together with Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A. All did admirably well and their services and co-operation are appreciated.

While there were two Tag Day workers who were close runners-up, special mention is due Felicias Knothe, and E. L. Walters, both of the normal school, who were "high" in the amount of collections in tags and memberships respectively. Miss Knothe sold tags for the amount of $41.52 and in addition sold five memberships, while Mr. Walters was high individual canvasser with an amount of $29.50.

"BO" M'MILLIN AND EDDIE CASEY PLAY IN CHARITY GAME

COLUMBUS, Ohio.—"Bo" McMillin, Centre college, all-American quarterback, and "Eddie" Casey, Harvard, all-American halfback, upheld their gridiron traditions Saturday by piloting to a 16 to 0 victory, a "rainbow" team composed of former star gridiron players from a score of universities and colleges, over a "Starbuck" team composed of Ohio State university stars at Ohio field. Players donated their services and proceeds went to local charity.

DARTMOUTH ELEVEN DEFEATS GEORGIA UNIVERSITY, 7 TO 0

ATLANTA, Ga.—Dartmouth's football team defeated Georgia university, seven to nothing, here Saturday. The green team from New Hampshire outplayed the Georgia Bull Dogs on offensives, gaining far more ground, but the only score was made on a long forward pass, one of two that were successful out of a dozen attempts.

COACH SKEMP HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR WITH ST. MARY'S

Tie Stout Institute in Armistice Day Battle by Score of 7 to 7

Under the coaching of T. H. Skemp, formerly of La Crosse, St. Mary's college of Winona came through the football season with a good record this year of but one defeat and tie score. The outstanding feature of St. Mary's schedule was the tieing of Stout Institute, 7 to 7, on Armistice Day. It was a spectacular game with neither team having the advantage.

The only victory scored over St. Mary's this season was that of St. Thomas, 7 to 0, which came as a result of a blocked punt in the second quarter. The crowning success of the year was the victory over St. John's university, 14 to 7.

TUBERCULOSIS DEATH RATE DROPS TO 114 IN EVERY 100,000

Reduction Equivalent to Saving of 80,000 Lives During Past Year

NEW YORK.—The reduction of the tuberculosis death rate to 114 per 100,000, recently announced by the U. S. Bureau of the Census, is equivalent to a saving of more than 80,000 lives in this country during the current year as contrasted with the tuberculosis death rate of 15 years ago, according to a statement issued by the National Tuberculosis Association.

In 1905 the death rate from tuberculosis was about 192 per 100,000. By 1910 it had declined to 160; in 1915 it was 146. There was a slight increase in 1917 and 1918, but in 1919 there was a sharp drop to 120 and in 1920 to 114. Reports received at headquarters of the National Tuberculosis Association indicate that the death rate for 1921 is still decreasing and probably will be lower than the one in 1920, which is the lowest on record.

BEN OTT TO TALK ACROSS THE OCEAN WITH HIS RADIO

La Crosse Wireless Outfit to be Used in First Attempt of Amateurs

The Radio Amateurs of the United States are going to make an attempt to bridge the Atlantic via the Ether, on the 6th to the 16th of December. The American Radio Relay League, an organization of U. S. and Canadian Amateurs is sponsoring the movement and is sending a map to England to listen for our signals. This is not being done because of any mistrust in the English Amateurs ability to receive, but simply because it puts to the faith in the proposition to have an American at the receiving end.

A preliminary test was held in November and all stations who entered this test had to transmit a distance of 1000 miles over land in order to qualify for the Transatlantic Tests. About forty five stations in the U. S. qualified, Station 9ZN, of La Crosse owned and operated by Ben Ott, has qualified and will be one of the participants in the final tests. Mr. Ott's station is the furthest station west entering into the contest and for that reason will be handicaped to the extent of approximately 1000 miles over those stations on the Eastern Coast. Mr. Ott, however, believes that his signals will get across the "Pond" as reports received from amateurs on both the East and West Coast of the U. S. state that his signals are heard regularly very loud and clear at those points.

This is the first instance in the history of Amateur radio that an attempt of this nature has been made. There is no doubt whatever in the minds of numerous Radio Engineers that some of our Domestic Stations will be heard in England, if the feat is accomplished it will be all the more remarkable due to the fact that the Amateur is restricted by the Government to the use of low power and wave length with their resultant supposedly poor carrying ability.

Traffic Ebbs on Tuesday

A traffic census taken by the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture shows that automobile traffic is doubled on Sunday and is at its lowest on Tuesday and Wednesday. These tests were made at several points along one of the most frequented roads of the country.
